Preface

The present report is the result of fifty days of continuous and intensive efforts by the specialized teams of Human Rights Activists in Iran. In the process of compiling this report, more than 143,330 reports from exclusive and open sources were collected, refined, verified, and analyzed, under the most difficult and security-restricted conditions possible, including periods when internet communications were completely cut off or severely limited.

This report has been prepared with the aim of providing a documented account of the minimum verifiable instances of violence inflicted and the widespread human rights violations committed in response to citizens' protests by the Iranian government. The emphasis on “documented minimums” means that the contents of this report include only those cases that could be methodologically verified; it is highly likely that the actual scope of events extends beyond the recorded figures and documented cases.

It is hoped that this document will serve as a basis for deeper analysis by researchers, human rights organizations, specialized groups, and international mechanisms, and that it will be utilized in support of the fundamental rights of Iranian citizens and in promoting accountability for the violations that have occurred.

It is evident that, despite adherence to the most rigorous possible standards in data collection and evaluation, this report may contain shortcomings or unintentional errors due to structural and security-related limitations—including the Iranian government's obstruction of the free operation of independent human rights organizations. Nevertheless, Human Rights Activists in Iran believes that this report provides the most accurate and comprehensive documented account of what occurred during the first fifty days of the 2025-2026 protests in Iran.

As time passes and additional information becomes accessible, this report will be updated and completed to present an ever more comprehensive picture of the human, legal, and social dimensions of these events.

To facilitate a better understanding of developments, the findings and analyses have been organized into thematic categories, enabling readers to follow the course of events and the various forms of human rights violations in a coherent and structured manner.

Framework and Background of the Protests

2025–2026 Nationwide Protests in Iran

The 2025–2026 Nationwide Protests in Iran were among the most widespread and complex waves of unrest in the past two decades. These protests differed significantly from previous movements—not only in terms of their geographic reach, intensity of violence, and scale of repression, but also in the way they emerged, the composition of their participants, and the government’s response.

An examination of the data and analyses presented in this report shows that this wave cannot be regarded merely as a continuation or repetition of the protests of 2009, 2017, 2019, 2021, or 2022. Rather, it represents a phenomenon rooted in the cumulative impact of overlapping economic crises, governance failures, and a deepening crisis of political legitimacy.

Nature of the Protests

Unlike certain previous periods of unrest that were organized around a specific catalyst, such as disputed election results or sudden economic shocks, these protests did not revolve around the pursuit of one or several clearly articulated demands. This wave of unrest emerged from a combination of reactions by guilds and bazaar merchants, street demonstrations, student gatherings, and localized violent responses.

This heterogeneity, while creating a more sustained and attritional dynamic compared to purely street-based uprisings, also meant that the movement did not operate under unified leadership or coordination, nor did it produce a single, cohesive narrative.

Comparison with Previous Protests

The 2009 protests were largely grounded in legal and reformist demands of the urban middle class. The 2017 and 2019 protests revolved around livelihood concerns and were primarily reactions to economic policies, while the trigger for the 2022 protests was the death in detention of Mahsa Jina Amini coupled with the longstanding suppression of social freedoms, including issues related to dress.

In comparison, the recent protests were more multidimensional and dispersed, incorporating all of these previous drivers. The role of the bazaar and guild networks as one of the initial catalysts represents one of the most significant differences from the 2022 protests. Owing to its capacity to strike, shut down businesses, and disrupt distribution cycles, the bazaar is able to exert more gradual and long-term pressure. However, the absence of sustained links between this guild-based capacity and other social groups limited the possibility of transforming that pressure into a coordinated political force.

Geography of the Protests

Geographically, the 2025–2026 Nationwide Protests in Iran extended to nearly the entire country. According to verified data, all 31 provinces and at least 203 cities witnessed protests between December 28, 2025, and February 15, 2026.

In total, 682 protest events were recorded, including 627 street gatherings and 55 assemblies held across 36 universities.

This geographic breadth reflects the depth of social discontent. However, the pattern of expansion was phased and discontinuous rather than simultaneous nationwide mobilization.

Slogans and Demands

An analysis of the slogans chanted during these protests indicates that the scope of demands extended beyond objections to economic conditions and evolved into a broader rejection of the political and governing structure as a whole.

Slogans such as “Death to the Dictator,” “Death to the Entire Regime,” “Woman, Life, Freedom,” “Poverty, Corruption, High Prices; We Will Continue Until Overthrow,” as well as explicit slogans against the Supreme Leader and security institutions, reflect the radicalization of protest discourse.

At the same time, the presence of nostalgic or identity-based slogans, along with calls for solidarity, demonstrates the diversity of ideological orientations within the movement.

Pattern and Expansion of Repression

One of the most notable features of this period was the expansion of repression beyond street spaces. Security and law enforcement forces intervened not only during street protests but also in medical centers, hospitals, and even along emergency response routes.

Raids on medical centers in Ilam and Tehran, the identification and arrest of injured individuals, the imposition of restrictions on the provision of medical services, and even the firing of tear gas within hospital grounds indicate a more intense level of securitization compared to the protests of 2022.

Security and Legal Framing

Alongside the intensification of on-the-ground repression, the government’s security-oriented view of the protests, emphasizing “zero tolerance” and attributing the unrest to foreign threats, played a significant role in legitimizing violence.

This policy, rather than seeking to respond to social demands, focused on deterrence, increasing the cost of participating in protests, and instilling fear among those who had not yet joined the demonstrations.

Human Casualties and Arrests

According to the data collected, the 2025–2026 Nationwide Protests were accompanied by significant human casualties. Thousands of protesting citizens, children, non-participating individuals, and several law enforcement and security personnel lost their lives.

In addition, thousands of individuals were arrested during protests. Estimates indicate that at least 53,777 people were detained, although due to severe restrictions on information flow, the actual figure may be higher. Mass arrests, the transfer of detainees to various prisons under poor physical conditions, and the broadcast of forced confessions were among the recurring patterns of this period.

Disruption of Communications and the Internet

Widespread disruption, and ultimately a nationwide shutdown, of the internet was one of the government's key responses to these protests. This digital blackout, imposed at the height of the protests, raised serious concerns about the escalation of repression and the concealment of human rights violations.

Final Summary

Overall, although the 2025–2026 Nationwide Protests in Iran did not lead to an immediate change in the structure of power, they constitute a historical turning point in the evolution of social protest in Iran. Recent events have demonstrated that protests have moved beyond the framework of sporadic, single-issue uprisings and have evolved into a multilayered, protracted confrontation driven by the accumulation of crises over the years.

Although at the time of writing, protests did not evolve into an organized movement, their experiences, costs, and patterns were added to society's collective memory and are recorded as an important chapter in the history of Iran's protest movements.

Challenges of Reporting

Alongside the course of the protests, there is always a parallel struggle over access to information. For independent media outlets and human rights organizations, sustained access to communications makes it possible to receive direct field reports, speak with witnesses, cross-check accounts, examine evidence, and publish findings in a timely manner. Without this communications infrastructure, documenting human rights violations shifts from a systematic and verifiable process to one that is high-risk, time-consuming, and more prone to error.

In Iran, this challenge is compounded. The country's legal and security structure fundamentally does not allow for the free and secure operation of independent media or human rights organizations. Many such entities are either unable to register or operate officially within the country, or their members and collaborators face threats, summons, arrests, and judicial pressure. Under these conditions, a significant portion of the documentation process necessarily relies on networks of informal sources, encrypted communications, anonymous information sharing, and voluntary citizen cooperation, a model that itself depends heavily on free and secure access to the internet and communication tools.

With the onset of the protests and the simultaneous escalation of repression, internet restrictions, disruptions to telephone communications, the creation of a securitized atmosphere, and threats against news sources effectively targeted one of the primary tools of independent media and human rights groups. These limitations not only reduced the speed and accuracy of information flow, but also made multi-source verification, geolocation of images, confirmation of detainees’ identities, and independent examination of official narratives significantly more difficult. In such an environment, any informational vacuum can easily be filled with rumors, misinformation, or manipulated accounts.

At the same time, technological developments, including the expansion of tools for producing and manipulating digital content, have further complicated the reporting environment. As the government restricts access to information while amplifying its official narrative through state media, independent media outlets and human rights organizations face two simultaneous challenges: limited direct access to field data and an increased risk of disseminating inaccurate or manipulated content.

The following three sections address the principal challenges that affected the processes of reporting and documenting human rights violations during the recent protests.

Artificial Intelligence

Challenges of Human Rights Reporting in Confronting AI-Generated Content During the 2025–2026 Nationwide Protests in Iran

The 2025–2026 Nationwide Protests in Iran marked a turning point in the experience of media reporting and human rights documentation, not only because of the scale and nature of the protests, but also due to the widespread entry of content produced or manipulated using artificial intelligence tools into the information cycle. Prior to this period, artificial intelligence, understood as publicly accessible tools, had not played a decisive role in generating visual content related to protests. Consequently, this period constituted the first serious experience for media outlets and human rights organizations, including HRA, in systematically confronting such content. This experience introduced new challenges in verification, evaluation, and publication of information.

During the protests, a substantial volume of videos and visual documentation was received, some of which had either been directly generated using artificial intelligence tools or had been altered through simpler yet effective manipulation techniques. These materials can be categorized into three primary groups, each presenting distinct challenges for reporting.

First, there were promotional and agitational videos designed to stir public emotions and shape audience perceptions. In this category, videos were observed in which historical or political figures, such as the former Shah of Iran, were artificially depicted calling on people to take to the streets or portraying an idealized, crisis-free future following the “victory of the revolution.” Although at first glance such videos might have appeared credible to segments of the public, contextual and historical review, such as the fact that these figures had passed away decades earlier, enabled professional verification teams to identify them as inauthentic. Nevertheless, the principal risk of this content lay not in directly deceiving professional institutions, but in its rapid influence on public opinion and its widespread circulation across social media platforms.

The second category consisted of videos that had been dubbed or otherwise manipulated in terms of audio. These videos were not necessarily produced using advanced artificial intelligence tools, but they served a similar function: altering the meaning of events. In some cases, videos from limited guild or protest gatherings were received in which newly added audio tracks attributed entirely different slogans or messages, whether political, ideological, or factional, to the footage.

Detecting this type of manipulation required close attention to technical and visual details, including mismatches between audio and individuals' lip movements, or the absence of corresponding ambient sounds in the footage, for example, vehicles in motion without the sound of engines. This category of videos was particularly dangerous, as it could distort the true nature of the protests and reinforce misleading or agenda-driven narratives.

The most difficult and sensitive aspect of reporting during this period concerned the third category: videos that appeared to depict real and violent scenes from the protests, including direct gunfire by security forces or multiple protesters lying dead on the ground. In such cases, it was not possible to quickly confirm or dismiss the authenticity of the content, and any error could have had serious consequences for the credibility of human rights reporting. Verification of these videos was only possible through a combination of technical indicators, such as unusually long video durations, excessively high or unusually low image quality, and careful examination of hand and facial movements, alongside cross-referencing with other field data. For example, it was necessary to determine whether other videos or reports had been received from the same geographic location and within the same timeframe, and whether there were independent reports of gunfire or casualties in that area.

As in previous periods, in addition to AI-generated or digitally manipulated content, other misleading videos were also received. These included footage from past protests in Iran or even videos from other countries, such as Syria, which were recirculated as if they were related to the ongoing protests. Such cases were identified and dismissed using digital tools, reverse image searches, metadata analysis, and reference to news and visual archives.

Taken together, these experiences demonstrate that artificial intelligence and digital manipulation tools have ushered protest reporting into a more complex phase, one in which the speed of content dissemination far exceeds the general capacity for verification, and the responsibility borne by professional media and human rights organizations has grown heavier than ever. In such an environment, caution, deliberate delay in publication, and reliance on multilayered verification processes are not signs of weakness, but essential conditions for maintaining credibility and integrity in documenting human rights violations.

From this perspective, the recent protests were not only a test for the protesting public and the governing authorities, but also a serious test for traditional methods of reporting, one that demonstrated that without continuous revision of tools, standards, and verification methods, responsible engagement with the complex realities of the age of artificial intelligence will not be possible.

Internet and Telecommunications Disruptions

Disruptions to communications, particularly internet and telephone services, during the ongoing protests differed in their initial phase from previous protest periods, such as November 2019 and the nationwide protests of 2022. At first, the disruptions appeared in a scattered, localized, and temporary manner in certain parts of the country. However, on the evening of Thursday, January 8, 2026, the twelfth day of the protests, nationwide internet access was largely shut down. According to technical data from the monitoring platforms NetBlocks and Cloudflare Radar, which track global internet connectivity, Iran's internet access dropped to approximately one percent of its normal level.

Evidence further indicates that other communication channels, such as telephone contact with individuals inside the country, were also blocked, placing Iran in a state of digital blackout for a period of 20 days.

Despite a gradual and limited reconnection, at the time of writing, internet access has not returned to normal conditions, and most ordinary users continue to face an unstable and heavily filtered network.

The second day of the protests starting with gatherings by a number of bazaar merchants and shopkeepers in Tehran, reports emerged of internet access restrictions in parts of Tehran and several other cities across the country.

Information collected by HRANA indicates that on that day, users in neighborhoods surrounding the Tehran Bazaar experienced complete or near-complete disruption of mobile internet services provided by the operators MCI (Hamrah-e Aval), Irancell, and Rightel. In addition, internet access restrictions were imposed in several areas of the capital, including Baharestan, Fatemi, Sadeghiyeh, Haft-e Tir, Amir Kabir, Ferdows Boulevard, Amirabad, Enghelab, and Valiasr Square.

These restrictions included extremely weak and effectively unusable mobile internet connections for several hours, disruptions to fixed-line internet services, intensified slowdowns during peak traffic hours, and the continuous need to change VPN settings in order to regain internet access.

During the initial days, reports also documented complete mobile internet shutdowns lasting several hours, severe slowdowns, disruptions to international connectivity with access limited to domestic services only, and significant speed reductions in MCI mobile services and Telecommunication Company fiber-optic (fixed-line) internet in cities such as Isfahan, Falavarjan, Fooladshahr, Bushehr, Sanandaj, Ilam, Mashhad, Shiraz, Marvdasht, and Fasa.

On the fourth day of the protests, the website Cloudflare Radar reported an approximately 35 percent decline in internet traffic volume compared to the country's normal baseline. Additionally, data from Filterban, a digital rights monitoring organization, indicates that as strikes and gatherings by shopkeepers and citizens continued, protocol-level anomalies, particularly affecting QUIC, were observed on the networks of MCI (Hamrah-e Aval) and Irancell between the fourth and eleventh days of the protests.

The continuation of this situation disrupted mobile internet services, high-traffic platforms, web browsers, applications, internet-based calls, and even the functioning of a significant number of VPNs. According to the same reports, during this period some VPN services either failed to connect altogether or became effectively unusable.

During this period, the government's policy regarding internet restrictions was not based on a complete nationwide shutdown, but rather on the implementation of gradual, localized, and calculated disruptions. In this approach, basic connectivity was maintained, but the quality and stability of access were deliberately degraded to the extent that practical use of the internet for communication, messaging, and coordination became severely constrained.

An examination of the pattern of these restrictions indicates that the disruptions were targeted and regional, often occurring in cities and specific areas where protest gatherings or university activities were taking place. This approach had also been observed in previous waves of unrest and has typically been employed to reduce protesters' ability to coordinate, disseminate information, and share images of demonstrations. By avoiding a total shutdown that could provoke widespread public backlash, this model effectively diminished protesters' communication capacity while limiting broader societal reaction to internet disruptions.

The partial restrictions imposed on internet access were not clearly reflected in macro-level data, as they were implemented at local network levels or at higher layers of connectivity. At the same time, intensified filtering, the widespread blocking of circumvention tools, and disruptions to widely used protocols led to service instability and a noticeable decline in traffic. The cumulative result of these measures was a network that appeared technically "connected," yet in practice had lost the capacity for stable information transfer and had become largely ineffective for users.

On the twelfth night of the protests, reports indicated that internet access had been shut down nationwide, and NetBlocks confirmed the situation as a widespread internet outage. NetBlocks initially reported a complete shutdown in Kermanshah Province and, in subsequent updates, warned that Tehran and several other cities were entering a state of "digital blackout." Within this context, it was also reported that on Thursday, January 8, severe disruptions, extreme slowdowns, and repeated connection drops continued across numerous cities.

Simultaneously, technical data pointed to a pattern of targeted disruption affecting IPv6 connectivity. According to reports, Filterban announced that a significant portion of IPv6 connections went offline around 15:19 Tehran time, with the timing pattern indicating a coordinated action. In the same vein, Cloudflare Radar reported a roughly 98.5 percent decline in IPv6 address volume, with IPv6 traffic share falling from approximately 12 percent to around 1.8 percent.

In another report published by Filterban indicates that the Islamic Republic has entered the final phase of a confidential project referred to as "Absolute Digital Isolation" or a "Communication Black Hole." The objective of this plan is to eliminate public access to the global internet and transform access to the digital world into a special security privilege granted only through high-level authorization to specific groups, primarily government officials and state institutions.

According to the report, Alireza Rafiei, CEO of Irancell, was reportedly dismissed as a punitive measure due to an approximately one-hour delay in implementing the order for a complete internet shutdown.

It has also been reported that foreign partners of certain telecommunications companies quietly left the country during the initial weeks of the protests—an action that may pave the way for their replacement by military-affiliated entities such as Khatam al-Anbia Headquarters, or for limited and tightly controlled cooperation with companies such as Huawei.

Domestic messaging platforms are reportedly being restricted to purely organizational and intra-team use (Enterprise Messenger), while peer-to-peer (P2P) communications with users outside institutions will be blocked. Security firms such as Yaftar and Douran have reportedly been tasked with upgrading Deep Packet Inspection (DPI) systems to identify and block VPN traffic connected to Starlink. Internet roaming services beyond national borders have also reportedly been brought under the control of the National Information Network, effectively amounting to a form of “exported filtering.”

In continuation of this report, Filterban, citing informed sources, stated that the project is being directed by Mohammad Amin Aghamiri, head of the National Cyberspace Center, along with security figures such as Mehdi Seyf-Abadi, Deputy for Security at the Passive Defense Organization. Government spokesperson Fatemeh Mohajerani also reportedly confirmed unofficially that access to the international internet would not be restored at least until Nowruz 1405 (March 2026), and that even after that date, conditions would not return to their previous state. Media outlets close to the ruling establishment, such as Tabnak, likewise warned users “not to expect the return of the international internet.”

These changes could lead to a sharp decline in international traffic, the bankruptcy of private internet service providers, and a multiple-fold increase in the cost of domestic traffic.

Overall, Filterban’s report points to a transition toward a model described as a “garrison-style internet” or a “security-tiered system,” in which citizens’ free access to the global digital sphere would effectively come to a permanent end and full control of communication infrastructure would be transferred to military-security headquarters. This transformation has unfolded alongside the recent nationwide protests and the widespread shutdown of internet and communications.

The website further cited network experts as saying that Iran’s internet has not merely experienced temporary disruption or outage; rather, evidence suggests that the network has entered a “new architecture.” Data from Cloudflare Radar indicates that following the Dey shutdowns, internet usage patterns deviated from normal baselines and traffic began fluctuating irregularly, a condition that may reflect “aggressive testing” aimed at shifting the network among three operational states: “smart surveillance,” “targeted disruption,” and “managed blackout.”

The newspaper Shargh also reported that filtered messaging applications remain stuck in an “updating” state, VPNs function only for a few minutes before ceasing to operate without warning, and access to services varies among users, even within the same location and on the same operator.

This situation does not signify a return to normal internet conditions, nor does it constitute a complete shutdown. Rather, it has produced an unstable, attritional, and unpredictable environment. According to network experts, what users are experiencing reflects a fundamental shift in Iran’s internet filtering model. Instead of relying on nationwide shutdowns or direct IP blocking, the new model is based on identifying traffic patterns and protocol types, using “smart” disruptions to undermine stable access.

Within this framework, the internet appears to remain technically connected, yet in practice it loses much of its functionality for a large portion of users and businesses. This approach reduces the political cost of a full internet shutdown while imposing significant economic damage and daily pressure on users and economic actors.

In this regard, the Minister of Information and Communications Technology stated that the widespread internet outages and disruptions in recent weeks have caused daily losses of approximately 500 billion tomans to the core of the digital economy and nearly 5 trillion tomans to the country’s overall economy. He emphasized that, given the direct and indirect employment of around 10 million people in the digital economy sector and the limited resilience of companies operating in this field, urgent measures must be taken to mitigate these damages.

Mohammad Ahmadi, Deputy Minister of Communications and CEO of the National Post Company, also reported an approximately 60 percent decline in postal traffic during the peak of the internet shutdown. He stated that financial losses exceeding 7.3 trillion rials had been incurred from the time of the internet disruption until early Bahman (late January/early February 2026, Europe time alignment), adding that this situation reflects serious damage to the country’s e-commerce sector and digital economy.

The widespread internet shutdown has raised serious concerns about the escalation of repression against protesting citizens. This situation may be viewed as indicative of extensive human rights violations and an effort to conceal the government’s violent response to the protests.

The restrictions imposed on the flow of information also prompted reactions from a number of international organizations, as well as political, civil, artistic, and athletic figures. What follows should not be understood as exhaustive.

The International Federation of Journalists issued a statement warning against the nationwide internet shutdown and the restriction of information flow in Iran.

Amnesty International likewise declared in a statement that, according to reports, security forces in Iran intensified their unlawful use of lethal force against protesters following the internet shutdown, resulting in additional deaths and injuries. The organization described the widespread internet blackout in Iran as a serious violation of human rights.

In addition, the United Nations Independent International Fact-Finding Mission called on the authorities of the Islamic Republic to immediately restore citizens’ access to the internet and mobile communications and to end the violent suppression of nationwide protests.

Ursula von der Leyen, President of the European Commission, and Hannah Neumann, Member of the European Parliament from Germany, also issued statements emphasizing citizens' rights to freedom of expression, peaceful assembly, and access to information, and called for the restoration of internet connectivity in Iran.

Shirin Ebadi, Jafar Panahi, Mohammad Rasoulof, and Mehdi Mahdaviakia were also among those who, referencing the nationwide protests of citizens in Iran, called for the removal of the extensive internet restrictions imposed across the country.

Starlink

Starlink During Iran's Internet Blackout: Capacity, Limitations, and Practical Effectiveness

The nationwide internet shutdown in Iran once again placed access to free communications at the center of human rights and media concerns. During this period, public attention and monitoring bodies focused more than ever on Starlink satellite internet, a service that, following the 2022 protests, had been regarded as one of the few viable means of bypassing filtering and internet shutdowns in Iran.

However, the experience of this blackout demonstrated that Starlink's effectiveness under conditions of complete and coordinated communications shutdown was significantly more limited than commonly assumed.

Prior to the evening of January 8, 2026, Iran's pattern of internet restrictions, though more complex than in previous years, was still implemented in a phased, regional, and controlled manner. Within this framework, Starlink had been able to function as an alternative communication channel for a segment of users, particularly in major urban centers, hotels, residential complexes, and certain companies.

Yet with the onset of protests, the internet shutdown was imposed suddenly and nationwide, to the extent that not only international and domestic internet access, but also international telephone communications and Starlink user access, were severely disrupted.

Technical assessments and statements by internet access experts indicated that, during this period, a widespread and coordinated disruption was imposed on the Starlink service for the first time. The transmission of military-grade jamming signals targeting the network's satellites initially disrupted a significant portion of data transmission and reception. Subsequently, the level of interference intensified to the point that practical access for many Iranian users was effectively eliminated.

The geographic dispersion of these disruptions further demonstrated that the jamming was not confined to one or a few specific locations; rather, a network of interference equipment had been deployed across the country. This suggests a level of technical preparedness by the authorities to counter satellite internet services during times of crisis.

This situation challenged the prevailing perception of Starlink as a “final solution” during internet shutdowns. Although the service is structurally independent of Iran’s domestic infrastructure and capable of bypassing software-based filtering and restrictions, the recent experience showed that it remains vulnerable to hardware and military tools such as signal jammers. Particularly in circumstances where the government opts for a comprehensive, security-driven blackout, Starlink is not immune to disruption.

At the same time, it is important to consider the inherent limitations of Starlink’s coverage. Even under the most optimistic estimates, the number of users of this service in Iran, whether individual or shared users, remains very limited in comparison to the country’s population. High costs, the need for physical equipment, legal and security risks, and predominantly shared usage have meant that Starlink is largely accessible only to specific groups and cannot realistically become a universal solution. As a result, even under the best circumstances, the service can function only as a limited and supplementary communication channel, rather than a comprehensive replacement for the internet.

Simultaneously with the disruption of Starlink, the widespread circulation of rumors and misinformation about “alternative connection methods” added to the challenges of this period. Claims such as connecting to Starlink through mobile USSD codes or the continued functionality of VPNs during a complete network shutdown were among these misleading assertions. Technical assessments demonstrated that none of these methods are effective under conditions of total network disconnection, and their recirculation contributed more to user confusion than to providing practical solutions.

From the perspective of human rights and media reporting, the experience of this period demonstrated that although Starlink has played an important role in maintaining a minimal flow of information in recent years, its capacity is significantly diminished when confronted with a complete and security-driven communications shutdown. The continued transmission of limited data and messages from inside the country to outside, despite the widespread blackout, suggests that a combination of fragmented communication routes, intermittent access points, and perhaps temporary gaps in enforcement continued to exist. However, this situation appears to have resulted less from the sustained effectiveness of Starlink and more from temporary gaps or inconsistencies in the implementation of the blackout.

Overall, this experience showed that Starlink in Iran is not an invulnerable tool, but rather a limited, high-risk, and containable capacity. While the service can play an effective role during periods of partial internet restriction, it is not, on its own, capable of guaranteeing the free flow of information under conditions of a complete and militarized communications shutdown. This reality once again underscores the importance of diversifying communication channels, avoiding reliance on a single technological tool, and recalibrating public expectations of communication technologies, expectations that, if not grounded in realism, may themselves become part of the information crisis.

Trends and Characteristics of the Protests

Phases of the Protests

The 2025–2026 Nationwide Protests in Iran can be analytically examined in two distinct phases: an initial phase shaped by economic triggers, and a phase of consolidation and expansion which, from approximately the tenth day onward, was marked by an explicit focus on anti-government slogans and demands for structural political change.

While the early days reflected a range of demands, the protests gradually converged toward a broader rejection of the political system as a whole. Over time, a clearer and more cohesive voice came to dominate the streets. Moreover, a comprehensive understanding of this movement requires careful attention to regional variations in protest patterns across the country.

1. Transition from Economic Demands to Calls for Regime Change

In its early days, the protests began with a focus on economic and livelihood grievances. In the capital and several major urban centers, guild networks and the bazaar played a significant role in shaping the protest environment. The closure of businesses and disruption of economic cycles constituted a form of structural pressure that went beyond mere street demonstrations. This development highlights the mobilizing function of pre-existing social and guild networks in initiating the protests.

As the protests expanded into other regions, particularly in the central and western provinces, the nature of collective action evolved, with some areas witnessing direct confrontations and heightened clashes. This geographic spread was accompanied by a shift not only in the intensity but also in the form of protest activity. From approximately the tenth day onward, slogans in most cities began to explicitly target the political structure and calls for regime change emerged as the central demand.

This transition, from opposition to economic policies to a rejection of the political system as a whole, suggests that the crisis moved beyond livelihood dissatisfaction and evolved into a crisis of political legitimacy. In other words, the demands were framed not at the level of “intra-system reform,” but at the level of “structural transformation.”

2. Emergence of a Unified Protest Voice and Geographic Convergence

Over time, the initial diversity of slogans gave way to greater convergence in protest messaging. In major cities, mid-sized towns, and even peripheral areas, anti-government slogans were repeatedly voiced as the dominant theme, and the demand for regime change became a shared rallying call among protesters. This convergence suggests that, notwithstanding local variations in the early stages, protesters gradually aligned around broadly common demands.

At the same time, regional differences in protest strategies remained evident. In the capital and several large metropolitan areas, a combination of business closures and street demonstrations was observed, largely focused on exerting economic pressure and demonstrating numbers. In some western provinces, protests assumed a more confrontational character, with cycles of repression and reaction intensifying the level of clashes. In mid-sized cities, a hybrid pattern emerged, street presence accompanied by limited business closures, which helped sustain the protest atmosphere over time.

Nevertheless, as the protests progressed, regional differences in slogans diminished, and anti-government messaging became a common element across most parts of the country. This trend indicates that while the geography of the protests was initially diverse, it ultimately converged at the discursive level.

3. Phased Expansion and Wave-Like Dynamics

The pattern of the protests' expansion was neither linear nor uniform; rather, it unfolded in phases and waves. At certain points, protest activity intensified in one region, and as it relatively subsided there, it gained momentum in other areas. This shifting of protest epicenters prevented complete dissipation of the protest climate and generated a form of nationwide dynamism.

Universities played a key role in this process. Student gatherings across various cities helped sustain the protests, even at times when streets were under heavy security pressure. The linkage between the streets, universities, and in some cases guild networks created an informal synchrony of action, enabling the protests to persist at a national level despite widespread repression.

4. Escalation of Repression and Its Impact on the Radicalization of Demands

As the protests expanded, the security response was implemented in an adaptive and multilayered manner. Intensified street control, mass arrests, pressure on the injured, and efforts to contain and shape the public narrative formed key components of this strategy. In certain regions, the severity of the security response was markedly higher, further intensifying the tension.

Yet the escalation of repression did not temper the radical tone of the protests. On the contrary, in many areas, the intensified security response further entrenched anti-government rhetoric and sharpened calls for regime change. The ensuing cycle of repression and counterreaction, particularly beyond the initial phase, accelerated the protests' transformation from expressions of economic grievance into an explicit political confrontation.

5. Structural Characteristics of This Period

This period of protest was marked by several key features:

- A rapid transition from economic grievances to explicit political and anti-regime demands;
- The emergence of nationwide convergence around unified anti-government slogans.

- A phased and wave-like expansion, characterized by shifting protest epicenters across the country;
- Regional variation in modes of protest, alongside eventual convergence in core demands.
- The sustained continuation of protests despite severe and adaptive repression.

Overall, the 2025–2026 Nationwide Protests in Iran can be regarded as a moment in which economic discontent evolved into an overt political confrontation, and the demand for regime change became the dominant and shared voice of the movement. These protests were not merely a temporary wave of unrest, but rather a phase in the deepening of the political divide at the national level.

Geography of the Protests

All 31 provinces of Iran witnessed protests between December 28, 2025, and February 15, 2026.

According to the findings of this report, a total of 203 cities across all 31 provinces experienced protests on 682 separate occasions. In cases where demonstrators were unable to take to the streets, a heavy security presence dominated the area.

Based on the 2016 national census, the combined population of the 203 cities that witnessed protests amounts to 44,866,746 people, representing more than half of the country's total population.

In addition to more than 627 large-scale street gatherings, 36 universities held protests on 55 occasions within their campuses.

The cities in which protesters took to the streets during the course of the protests have been verified by HRANA as follows.

64. “Honorable fellow citizen, support! Support!”

65. “You are the lecher, you are the immoral one — I am a free woman.”

Structure and Instruments of Repression

Repressive Forces

This section explains the forces that have been directly present in the field during the protests in Iran or have directed and supported repression operations. The primary focus is on the operational role of the forces in the current situation; however, comparisons will also be made with certain previous patterns of repression. The data is based on field information collected by HRANA and HRA's Spreading Justice.

Ground Forces of the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps

In the recent wave of protests, the only branch of the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps (IRGC) to assume a direct, on-the-ground role in repression has been its Ground Forces. Other IRGC structures, including central headquarters and provincial corps, have functioned primarily in command, coordination, and operational support capacities, rather than serving as the principal executive force in the field.

Role and Pattern of Intervention in the Protests

The IRGC Ground Forces entered the scene when protests exceeded the level of routine police control, and the situation has been defined as “critical.” Their deployment has primarily involved the positioning of combat units, the use of military-grade weapons, and the imposition of strict control over designated areas.

According to HRANA's field data, evidence recorded in some provinces includes the following:

- The presence of units affiliated with the IRGC Ground Forces in the streets,
- The use of firearms with live ammunition,
- Participation in mass arrests.

This pattern of intervention indicates that, in the ongoing protests, the level of confrontation has escalated from law enforcement control to military intervention, with the IRGC Ground Forces playing a decisive role in this shift.

Related Command Structures (Non-Field Role)

- Sarallah Headquarters in Tehran: Responsible for directing and coordinating large-scale operations in Tehran during critical situations.
- Provincial IRGC Corps: Organizing local forces, mobilizing the Basij, and providing logistical support for operations.

These structures played decision-making and coordinating roles rather than acting as independent executive forces in the field.

Basij (Paramilitary Force Affiliated with the IRGC)

The Basij remains one of primary on-the-ground forces in the routine enforcement response. Organized on a neighborhood-based structure, it is, in many areas, the first non-police force to appear on the scene.

Units Active in the Ongoing Protests

- Ashura (male) and Al-Zahra (female) Battalions: Rapid urban response units with direct street presence.
- Beit al-Moqaddas Battalions: Neighborhood-based units providing anti-riot support.
- Kowsar Battalions (female): Combat and security units of the Basij Sisters.
- Imam Ali Security Battalions: The Basij's primary anti-riot force during escalated phases of protests.
- Imam Hossein Battalions: Higher-readiness combat units that have been deployed in certain areas.

Operational Pattern

In the ongoing protests, the Basij has primarily operated through:

- Motorcycle patrols,
- Deployment within neighborhoods,
- Identification and pursuit of protesters,
- And direct participation in street arrests.

According to HRANA's reports, a significant portion of arrests have been carried out by Basij forces without the presentation of warrants or formal identification.

Law Enforcement Command of the Islamic Republic of Iran (FARAJA)

The Law Enforcement Command of the Islamic Republic of Iran (FARAJA) has been the principal and permanent force directly confronting protesters at the urban level during the ongoing protests.

Active Units:

- FARAJA Special Units: The backbone of street-level repression; continuously deployed across all provinces.
- FARAJA Relief Units: Operational support forces at the provincial level.
- NOPO (Special Police Unit): Limited but targeted deployment in sensitive locations.
- Riot Control Border Guards: Deployed in restive border regions.
- Prevention Police and Local Police Stations: First responders to small gatherings.
- Police Intelligence and Security (PAVA): Responsible for identification, surveillance, and on-site arrests.

Field Evidence:

HRANA has documented FARAJA's extensive use of the following measures during the ongoing protests:

- Pellet-firing shotguns,
- Tear gas in residential areas,
- Direct physical violence,
- And entry into medical centers to arrest injured individuals.

Plainclothes Forces and Intelligence Bodies

Plainclothes forces, operating in coordination with intelligence bodies, including the IRGC Intelligence Organization and the Ministry of Intelligence, have played a complementary yet significant role in suppressing the ongoing protests.

Pattern of Activity

According to HRANA's data, these forces have been actively involved in:

- Targeted and nighttime arrests,
- Pursuing protesters after gatherings have dispersed,
- And identifying and detaining injured individuals in hospitals.

The presence of these forces has effectively erased the boundary between law enforcement and security operations during the ongoing protests, expanding repression beyond the streets and into everyday spaces.

Weapons and Tools Used in the Suppression of Nationwide Protests in Iran

The recent nationwide protests in Iran have been met with the extensive and simultaneous use of a wide range of repressive tools and weapons. An examination of field data indicates that many of these instruments have been deployed beyond conventional crowd-control patterns, resulting in the killing and injury of thousands of citizens, including unarmed protesters. Below is an overview of the principal weapons and tools used, along with their documented methods of deployment and impact.

Long Firearms with Lethal Ammunition (Assault Rifles)

Common Models:

- Kalashnikov AK-47 / AKM (domestically produced and imported versions)
- AK-74 (used in certain units)

Technical Specifications:

- Caliber: 7.62×39 mm (AK-47/AKM) | 5.45×39 mm (AK-74)
- Magazine capacity: Typically, 30 rounds (20- and 40-round magazines also exist)

- Firing capability: Semi-automatic and fully automatic (burst fire)

Kalashnikov rifles are military assault weapons designed for armed combat and use high-penetration live ammunition. The bullets fired from these weapons can pass through soft body tissue, destroy vital organs, and cause death within a short period of time. In urban environments, both automatic bursts and single shots from such weapons significantly increase the risk of secondary impacts and multiple casualties.

According to HRANA's field documentation, the use of assault rifles with live ammunition has been reported in cities including Tehran, Bandar Abbas, Malekshahi, Mashhad, Azna, Qorveh, and Marvdasht, and in numerous cases has resulted in the deaths of civilians. Documented consequences include deep penetrating wounds, severe internal bleeding, destruction of vital organs, immediate death, and fatalities resulting from delayed access to medical care.

Semi-Automatic Long Firearms (G3 and Similar Rifles)

Common Models:

- G3A3 / G3A4 (G3)
- HK-91 (a civilian variant closely related to the G3, reportedly observed in some units)

Technical Specifications:

- Caliber: 7.62×51 mm NATO
- Magazine capacity: Typically, 20 rounds
- Firing capability: Semi-automatic (some variants feature a fire selector)

The G3 is a battle rifle with a highly effective range and substantial destructive power. The high energy of its rounds can remain lethal even after passing through light barriers. In urban environments, each discharge of a G3, even without precise targeting, can result in serious or fatal injuries and significantly increases the risk of striking additional individuals.

HRANA's reports indicate that G3 rifles, alongside other long firearms, have been used in the suppression of protests, including in cities such as Tehran, Kermanshah, and Karaj. Documented medical consequences include limb rupture, severe bone destruction, trauma to the heart, lungs, or brain, and death within a short period of time.

Handguns with Live Ammunition

Common Models:

- Beretta 92FS
- Glock 17 / Glock 19

Technical Specifications:

- Caliber: 9×19 mm
- Magazine capacity: Typically, 15 to 17 rounds (higher-capacity magazines also exist)

Handguns, due to their ease of carry and use at close range, play a prominent role in street-level control operations. Although their effective range is shorter than that of long rifles, they possess high lethality at close distances, and shots striking vital organs can result in immediate death.

According to HRANA's field observations, the use of handguns with live ammunition was recorded in Tehran and Mashhad on the thirteenth and fourteenth days of the protests. Evidence indicates that the shootings involved direct targeting of individuals in urban environments. Documented consequences include severe internal bleeding, trauma to vital organs, and death.

Paintball Guns

Common Models:

- Tippmann 98 Custom
- Tippmann FT-12 (training/control model)

Technical Specifications:

- Projectile caliber: Approximately 0.68 inches
- Hopper capacity: Variable (typically 100 to 200 rounds)

Paintball markers are designed for sporting activities; however, they have been used as tools of repression during protests. Firing at close range or deliberately targeting sensitive organs, particularly the face and eyes, can result in severe injuries.

HRANA's field reports indicate serious injuries resulting from the improper and targeted use of these weapons. Documented consequences include bone fractures, soft tissue rupture, and permanent loss of vision. According to HRANA's findings, these weapons have been used in cities such as Tehran, Karaj, Mashhad, and Kermanshah.

Shotguns and Metal Pellet Weapons

Common Models:

- Remington 870
- Mossberg 500

Technical Specifications:

- Gauge: 12-gauge
- Tube/Magazine capacity: Typically, 5 to 8 shells
- Reported ammunition type: Metal pellets (birdshot) and, in some cases, plastic rounds

Shotguns discharge dozens of pellets simultaneously in a spreading pattern. Metal pellets are inherently uncontrollable and can inflict simultaneous injuries to multiple vital organs. At close to medium range, these weapons can be lethal.

Amnesty International has documented the widespread use of metal pellets, and HRANA has reported that on the 8th, 10th, and 13th days of the protests, these weapons caused severe injuries and blindness, including in cities such as Tehran, Karaj, Kermanshah, and Mashhad. Documented medical consequences include permanent blindness, retinal rupture, destruction of the eyeball, multiple pellet penetration to the chest or abdomen, and internal bleeding.

Sniper Rifles (Sayyad, Dragunov, and Similar Models)

Common Models:

- Sayyad
- Steyr SSG 08 (limited field reports of deployment)

Technical Specifications:

- Caliber: 7.62×51 mm or 7.62×54R (depending on the model)
- Magazine capacity: Typically 5 to 10 rounds

Sniper rifles are designed for precision targeting at long distances, and each discharge carries a high likelihood of lethality. The use of such weapons in protests indicates deliberate long-range targeting of individuals and represents an escalation of repression to the conscious deployment of lethal force.

The consequences of impact include extensive organ destruction, a very high probability of death, and a significant reduction in the victim's chances of survival. HRANA has reported the use of these weapons in Tehran and Mashhad.

Machine Guns and Vehicle-Mounted Heavy Weapons

Common Models:

- PKM
- DShK

Technical Specifications:

- Caliber: 7.62×54R (PKM) | 12.7×108 mm (DShK)
- Rate of fire: High (hundreds of rounds per minute)
- Feed system: Belt-fed

Machine guns are designed to provide suppressive fire and enable wide-area domination. Their deployment on security vehicles in urban environments, even without direct firing, significantly increases the level of threat and public intimidation. Any discharge of such weapons in residential areas could result in widespread casualties and unpredictable harm, reflecting the full militarization of the response to protests.

Although HRANA has documented the presence of this equipment, it has not, to date, identified confirmed victims resulting from direct gunfire by these weapons.

Other Patterns of Human Rights Violations

Notable Human Rights Violations

The 2025–2026 nationwide protests were not limited to street confrontations or the use of weapons against demonstrators; rather, they were accompanied by a wide range of human rights violations, many of which occurred beyond the immediate sites of clashes and even after gatherings had dispersed. A review of the collected documentation indicates that human rights violations during the protests were not limited solely to killings in the streets.

In addition to direct casualties resulting from security force actions, the inviolability of medical centers was breached, injured individuals were subjected to identification and arrest within hospital environments, medical treatment processes were disrupted by security interference, and the families of those killed faced restrictions, pressure, and a lack of transparency in the process of body release and official notification. At the same time, the widespread broadcast of forced confessions prior to due judicial process became a tool for shaping the public narrative and fostering an atmosphere of intimidation.

The accumulation of victims' bodies in forensic medicine centers, reports of irregular interventions in medical and forensic procedures, pressure on media outlets to refrain from covering these issues, and the suspension or closure of publications all indicate that the scope of violations extended beyond the use of force into the realms of healthcare, information dissemination, fair trial rights, and human dignity.

What follows is a review of specific and documented forms of these violations which, taken together, illustrate a multidimensional pattern of repression. Within this pattern, security, judicial, media, and other state institutions were deployed in a coordinated manner to suppress the protests and shape the official narrative.

Security Forces' Raid on Medical Centers

During the 2025–2026 Nationwide Protests, one of the most alarming and prominent developments was the violation of the inviolability of medical centers and the raids carried out by security forces on hospitals and emergency facilities with the aim of identifying and arresting protesters and injured individuals who had sought medical treatment there.

There were also reports of attempts by security forces to transfer the bodies of those killed and to interfere in the treatment process of the injured. According to verified reports and documentation, law enforcement and security agents attacked at least three medical centers during the protests.

1. Raid on “Dr. Fattahi” Emergency Center - Ilam

On January 3, 2026 (the seventh day of the protests), HRANA obtained documentation showing that security forces raided the “Dr. Fattahi” Emergency Center in the city of Ilam. Those killed and injured during the previous day’s protests in Malekshahi County had been transferred to this emergency facility.

According to received reports, security forces entered the medical center with the aim of transferring the bodies of those killed as well as some of the injured. The action prompted a public reaction, and a number of citizens gathered in front of the emergency center, chanting protest slogans, including “Death to Khamenei.”

2) Attack on Imam Khomeini Hospital in At Least Two Phases – Ilam

Reports and eyewitness accounts indicate that the raid by security forces on Imam Khomeini Hospital in Ilam was not limited to a single incident; rather, the medical center was targeted in at least two distinct phases of security intervention.

On January 3, following the transfer of injured individuals and the bodies of those killed in the protests in Malekshahi County to Imam Khomeini Hospital in Ilam, security forces entered the hospital grounds in an effort to prevent citizens from gathering. While creating an atmosphere of fear and intimidation, they proceeded to identify injured individuals and transfer some of them, along with several bodies.

The second raid took place on the evening of January 4, concurrent with nighttime protests in the city of Ilam. A significant number of security forces entered the hospital grounds and certain sections of the facility in a widespread deployment. According to published videos and accounts from HRANA’s network, present in the area, security forces responded to citizens’ gathering and protests by firing tear gas into the hospital compound, while the sound of gunfire was also heard around the medical center.

During these interventions, the newspaper Ham-Mihan reported that at least one injured individual was arrested before completing medical treatment. Additional measures included restrictions on movement within the hospital, surveillance of treatment areas, and the deployment of security forces in front of the blood transfusion center to prevent blood donations. These actions created an atmosphere of fear and led to serious disruption of the normal provision of medical services at Imam Khomeini Hospital in Ilam.

Coverage of security forces' raids on medical centers during the Protests by the newspaper Ham-Mihan resulted in the paper's suspension. The editor-in-chief of Ham-Mihan announced that the decision was made by the Press Supervisory Board due to the publication of two recent articles.

Mohammad Javad Rouh, the newspaper's editor-in-chief, stated that one of the articles cited by the Press Supervisory Board was titled "When the Sanctity of Treatment Was Broken," written by Elaheh Mohammadi. The piece was featured on the front page under the headline "The Hospital Story: From Ilam to Sina" in issue No. 976, published on January 7. He further noted that the second article referenced was his own editorial, published on January 15.

3) Raid on Sina Hospital – Tehran

On January 6, 2026, HRANA received reports of the presence and intervention of security forces at Sina Hospital in Tehran. According to these reports, security forces were deployed in and around the hospital compound with the aim of identifying and arresting individuals injured during the protests, and fired tear gas into the hospital grounds.

This security presence created an atmosphere of fear and disrupted the treatment process. A number of injured individuals reportedly refrained from seeking or continuing medical care out of fear of arrest. Videos received by HRANA from the incident also captured the sound of gunfire in the vicinity of the hospital. Reports indicate that tear gas was fired not only within the hospital compound but also along routes used by patients and visitors.

Accumulation of the Bodies of Killed Protesters at Kahrizak Forensic Medicine Center

During the peak days of the 2025-2026 Nationwide Protests, amid intensified street repression and the mass arrest of protesters, a series of disturbing videos and images were circulated online, all pointing to a single location: the Kahrizak Forensic Medicine Center in southern Tehran.

According to HRANA's review, these videos were primarily recorded between approximately January 10 and January 12, 2026, and were gradually released at a time when severe internet disruptions or shutdowns made the transmission of visual evidence from inside the country highly risky and difficult. Nevertheless, the number of independent sources, the similarity of the scenes, and the temporal and geographical consistency of the footage collectively support the authenticity of the videos.

In the videos received by HRANA, scenes were visible that clearly indicated the large-scale accumulation of bodies. Black body bags were seen densely arranged and, in some cases, stacked atop one another in halls, corridors, and spaces that appeared to lack the standard capacity of a morgue facility. In some images, bodies were placed in auxiliary areas and outside designated cold storage spaces, an indication of unprecedented strain on forensic infrastructure, and the high number of casualties within a short period. In one video, a voice could be heard stating that “all the rooms are full,” while in another, families were seen moving among tightly packed rows of body bags, searching for signs to identify their loved ones.

A closer examination of these videos, beyond revealing the unusual scale of fatalities, contains troubling details regarding the identity of some victims and the condition of the bodies. In one image, the name “Parnian” along with the birth year 1388 (2009-2010) is written on the black plastic covering a deceased individual—indicating that the victim was only 16 years old. The publication of this image significantly heightened concerns about the killing of children and adolescents during the suppression of the protests.

In other videos, the condition of certain bodies reveals signs of severe and unusual violence. In one scene, a body is visible with the abdominal area clearly torn open. In another video, a corpse is shown bearing extensive burn marks across the body. Additionally, in many of the images, severe head trauma is evident, with visible signs of gunshot wounds to the head in some cases.

HRANA emphasizes that, without access to official autopsy reports, it is not possible to make definitive conclusions about the precise cause of death in these cases. However, the observable pattern of injuries in these videos raises serious questions regarding the manner of confrontation and the unprecedented level of violence used by security forces against protesters.

Based on the published images from this incident, some scenes show indications of body numbering or registration, suggesting a hurried effort to manage the high volume of corpses. Regardless of the precise figures, what stands out in these images is the abnormal scale of fatalities directly linked to the street protests—a scale that does not align with the officially announced statistics and explanations.

One member of a bereaved family, speaking to HRANA, described how, after several days without information about their child’s whereabouts, they went to the Kahrizak Forensic Medicine Center and encountered what they described as “more like a storage warehouse for bodies than a place for the humane handling of victims.” The family member added that no clear explanation was provided regarding the cause of death or the procedure for releasing the body, and that they were simply urged to remain silent. Other similar testimonies received by HRANA point to recurring patterns, including delays in notification, lack of transparency about the cause of death, and informal pressure on families to refrain from public statements or interviews with the media.

These videos and testimonies, alongside other field reports, paint a deeply troubling picture of the authorities’ treatment of protesters—one characterized by the extensive use of force, the deaths of a significant number of unarmed citizens, including teenagers, and the subsequent accumulation of bodies without transparent reporting or effective accountability. Such actions amount to a clear violation of the deceased’s right to life and human dignity. It should also be noted that the mutilation or desecration of a deceased person’s body constitutes cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment, and in severe cases torture, against the victim's relatives, as it intentionally inflicts acute psychological suffering and humiliation. It also violates the right to respect for human dignity, including the family's right to humane treatment and to mourn and bury their loved one with dignity. The significance of this documentation is heightened by the climate of information suppression and the absence of independent domestic oversight, circumstances in which visual evidence has become one of the primary tools for human rights documentation.

What was observed at the Kahrizak Forensic Medicine Center was shortly thereafter witnessed, on varying scales, in other locations as well, including a hospital in Tehranpars, the Kermanshah Forensic Medicine Center, and the vicinity of Behesht-e Reza Cemetery in Mashhad. These cases are not merely a collection of distressing images; rather, they constitute concrete evidence of the depth of the crisis imposed on Iranian society during the protests.

Statement by Medical Professionals

Publication of a Medical Statement on Concerning Patterns in the Treatment of Injured and Deceased Protesters in Iran

A group of medical doctors, paramedical professionals, and forensic medicine specialists issued an analytical statement, a copy of which was provided to HRA, declaring that a systematic review of publicly available images and videos from Iran reveals serious and alarming patterns of violations of fundamental medical, forensic, and human rights principles during recent events.

According to the statement, the assessments were based on independent analyses conducted by physicians, nurses, emergency responders, forensic pathologists, and staff working in medical centers, hospitals, and morgues.

Medical experts emphasized that in numerous cases, evidence was observed indicating that hospital-based medical interventions had been performed prior to the deaths of some of the deceased. Such evidence includes the presence of equipment remaining on the bodies, such as intravenous cannulas (Angio catheters), urinary catheters, endotracheal tubes, and cardiac monitoring devices.

The authors of the statement stressed that these medical devices are used exclusively in clinical and emergency settings, and their presence indicates that the individuals were alive at the time they were receiving medical care. From a medical perspective, this suggests that death occurred after the initiation of therapeutic intervention.

According to the authors, the observation of such medical equipment on bodies outside clinical settings raises serious concern. This situation may indicate the transfer of patients without official confirmation of death, or the killing of individuals after medical treatment had already begun. They emphasized that such actions constitute a clear violation of the principle of medical neutrality and the professional obligation to protect patients.

In another section of the statement, reference is made to cases in which signs inconsistent with confirmed death prior to the transfer of bodies were observed. It was also reported that in some instances, individuals with gunshot wounds were left without triage, emergency care, or life-saving intervention. From the perspective of emergency medicine, such conduct can result in preventable deaths.

The statement further notes the presence of extensive longitudinal abdominal incisions on a number of bodies. These incisions were reported to fall outside documented and recognized forensic medical frameworks. According to the authors, such findings raise serious concerns regarding the destruction of forensic evidence or potential unlawful actions, including organ removal or the concealment of signs of trauma and severe violence.

The statement further raises evidence of severe physical violence, mutilation, complete decapitation, and the improper and collective handling of bodies. Medical experts emphasized that such actions are incompatible with established medical and forensic standards. Moreover, these practices seriously obstruct the processes of identification, determination of cause and manner of death, and legal accountability.

Additionally, in some cases, findings were reported that are medically consistent with exposure to toxic chemical substances. Instances of severe thermal destruction of remains were also observed. According to the authors, such conditions significantly limit the possibility of conducting independent and credible forensic examinations.

The statement stressed that the report is based solely on the analysis of publicly available images and videos. Due to the lack of direct access to bodies, scenes, or medical records, and the absence of the ability to conduct in-person examinations, the report is subject to methodological limitations.

Nevertheless, they concluded that the documented findings are consistent with patterns of systematic misconduct in the context of mass casualties and with severe and gross violations of human rights.

This statement was issued with the aim of providing preliminary medical and forensic documentation, preserving evidence, identifying concerning patterns, and supporting future independent and impartial investigations.

Firing the “Final Shot”; Transition to a New Phase of Violence

One of the most horrifying and at the same time unprecedented dimensions of the repression during the 2025-2026 protests has been the repeated reports of “final shots” fired at injured street protesters; a phenomenon that, at this scale and with such a recurring pattern, had not been observed in previous waves of nationwide protests in Iran. Whereas in earlier waves killings largely occurred in the context of street clashes, direct gunfire, or the widespread use of lethal weapons, during this period we encountered evidence indicating that part of the violence was completed after individuals had been wounded and, in some cases, even after they had been transferred to medical centers.

Field investigations and documentation conducted within the framework of this report indicate that, in a significant number of deaths, gunshot wounds to the forehead or chest, particularly in the area of the heart, were recorded; a pattern of impact that, from a medical and clinical perspective, is consistent with close-range fire with lethal intent. In some cases, received images and reports suggested that the injured were shot while still connected to resuscitation or medical equipment; a situation that is incompatible with the assumption of the routine transfer of a wounded person to a hospital and the provision of medical care, and which raises serious questions about the time, place, and circumstances of the final shot.

From the very first days of the escalation of protests, accounts emerged from eyewitnesses, families, and medical staff describing final shots fired at the wounded. These accounts were initially fully denied by official authorities. However, two subsequent official statements, albeit framed in security terms and attributing responsibility to “terrorists”, effectively confirmed the occurrence of “final shots.”

On February 17, 2026 (29 Bahman 1404), Javad Tajik, CEO of Behesht-e Zahra Organization, stated in a press conference that “more than 70 percent of the bodies had been shot with a final shot,” while claiming that this had been carried out by “terrorists” and that “Basij members do not fire final shots.” He also announced that of the 1,124 bodies received at Behesht-e Zahra, 511 had been buried in Tehran and the remaining bodies transferred to other cities. This marked the first time a responsible official explicitly acknowledged the existence of a pattern of final shots during the protests, although he attributed responsibility to protesters or non-governmental armed forces.

Earlier, on January 12, 2026 (22 Dey 1404), Abbas Araghchi had referred in a media interview to an incident in which, according to his account, “in one case, people wanted to take 11 individuals to the hospital; some said they would take them themselves, and later, elsewhere, all 11 were found with final shots.” Although this narrative was similarly attributed to “armed elements,” the mere reference to the discovery of a group of bodies bearing signs of final shots constituted an implicit confirmation of the existence of such a phenomenon.

The significance of these developments lies not merely in their statistical dimension, but in the qualitative shift in the pattern of violence. Firing final shots at the wounded, if the responsibility of government forces is established, signifies a transition from the lethal use of force in the context of clashes to the deliberate and consummating elimination of individuals after they have been rendered defenseless. Such conduct cannot be justified even within limited or interpretive frameworks of domestic law and, under international law, may constitute extrajudicial killing and a grave violation of the right to life.

Moreover, numerous reports from families indicate that injured individuals disappeared after seeking care at medical centers, and days later their bodies, bearing gunshot wounds, were delivered from morgues. In some cases, there were reports of security forces preventing the full provision of medical services or the presence of agents in emergency wards. Taken together with documented raids on medical centers in other sections of this report, this body of evidence presents a picture of the securitization of medical spaces and the erosion of the principle of medical neutrality.

What makes this phenomenon particularly alarming is its psychological and social impact. If in previous periods the primary danger to protesters was defined in the streets, during this period the implicit message was that even being wounded and transferred to a hospital did not guarantee survival. Such a situation creates a level of structural intimidation that places not only protesters, but also families, medical staff, and even witnesses under constant threat.

Within the analytical framework of this report, the “final shot” is not merely a method of killing; it is a sign of the intensification of a logic of physical elimination in confronting protests. The official acknowledgment of its occurrence, even while attributing responsibility to others, marks a point of historical and legal significance. This development elevates the level of violence from harsh repression to a pattern approaching targeted and direct elimination, and its precise, impartial, and multilayered documentation is of fundamental importance for future legal and international proceedings.

Overall, the phenomenon of firing final shots at the wounded is one of the most prominent and shocking dimensions of the 2025-2026 protests; a dimension that redefines not only the number of fatalities but also the very nature of the repression at a new level, demonstrating that previous boundaries on the use of violence were seriously shifted during this period.

State Reliance on Coerced Forced Confessions

140 Videos, 369 Confessions in Less Than Two Months

State reliance on forced confessions under pressure: 144 videos, 369 confessions in less than two months. According to documentation collected by HRA between December 28, 2025 (7 Dey 1404) and February 15, 2026 (26 Bahman 1404), a total of 336 individuals appeared in 144 videos containing forced confessions under pressure in connection with the events in question. This unprecedented volume constitutes the largest use of forced confessions as a tool of intimidation in at least the past four decades.

Although state media had broadcast forced confessions during previous protest periods, the scale, temporal concentration, and breadth of dissemination during this period differ significantly from earlier patterns. The density and volume of recorded cases indicate an intensified and systematic reliance on forced confessions to control the narrative surrounding the protests.

Central Narratives, Strategic Justifications, and Deterrent Function

The forced confessions appear to have been disseminated with the aim of attributing leadership and organization of the protests to foreign actors, particularly the United States and Israel, while simultaneously undermining independent narratives regarding violence and repression by state institutions. Within this framework, authorities have sought to discredit domestic critics by accusing them of “echoing” foreign governments, thereby portraying internal dissent as an externally directed project.

This strategy has not been limited to detainees. In some cases, family members of those killed have also appeared in state media and, under unclear circumstances, made statements. This indicates that coercive efforts to impose alignment with the official narrative have extended beyond detainees to include affected families, thereby broadening the intimidating and deterrent dimension of these broadcasts.

A Multi-Layered Dissemination Strategy; From State Media to Judicial and Security Institutions

The dissemination of forced confessions during this period has followed a coordinated and multi-channel pattern. Statistically, Tasnim News Agency, affiliated with the IRGC, broadcast the highest number of forced confessions. The Islamic Republic of Iran Broadcasting (IRIB) played a central role, particularly during periods of internet shutdown. Other media outlets affiliated with or close to governmental and security institutions subsequently republished and amplified this content, including Mizan News Agency (affiliated with the Judiciary), IRNA (the official government news agency), media outlets close to the IRGC such as Fars, and Telegram channels aligned with security institutions, including Saber News, Akhbar Sepah Quds, and Bi Simchi Media.

This dissemination architecture represents a clear departure from prior reliance solely on state broadcasting. Utilizing a broader network enables rapid circulation of content across platforms, increases message penetration, and distributes institutional responsibility among multiple actors, while the overall effect remains focused on intimidation and narrative control.

Conditions of Confession Extraction; A Documented History of Coercion

Independent verification of the conditions under which these videos were recorded, the nature of interrogations, and the methods used to obtain confessions is not possible. However, the Islamic Republic of Iran has a long and documented history of extracting confessions under pressure, threats, deprivation of fundamental rights, and torture—an issue recorded in numerous domestic and international human rights reports, including independent investigations by HRANA.

In this context, the voluntary and informed nature of such confessions is highly questionable. Indicators of this are visible in some videos. For example, in one case, a young, detained woman rejected part of the official narrative claiming that stones had been thrown at “protesting citizens,” emphasizing instead that stones had been thrown toward uniformed forces. This exchange demonstrates that even within staged confessions, narratives do not always fully align with the official security framework.

Official Positions on Sentences; Confessions Amid Ongoing Cases

The Judiciary’s Media Center has stated that cases related to the protests “remain under review and none of the verdicts have reached a final and enforceable stage.” Other Iranian officials, including the Foreign Minister, have also emphasized that none of the detained protesters have been executed. These statements were made in response to reports by foreign media regarding widespread and secret executions, which officials have denied.

Nevertheless, the process of extracting confessions and publicly broadcasting them began in the first days following the protests and continues. This simultaneity—the suspension of final judicial outcomes on the one hand and the extensive display of confessions on the other—indicates that confessions have been exposed to public opinion prior to the completion of legal proceedings and fair trial processes.

Direct Emphasis by the Head of the Judiciary on Media Coverage

During this period, the Head of the Judiciary publicly emphasized “media coverage” of the proceedings. He announced that arrangements would be made for certain “main elements of the recent unrest” to be tried publicly and with media dissemination.

It has also been reported that he spent several hours at one of Tehran’s detention centers meeting with detainees, and videos of these meetings—showing him personally playing a role in the confession process—were broadcast in official media.

Violation of Fundamental Rights

Iranian defense lawyers have reported that broadcasting “confessions” prior to a defendant’s court appearance or before the conclusion of judicial proceedings constitutes a serious violation of the presumption of innocence and fundamental defense rights. Public dissemination of such statements may influence public opinion, stigmatize and discredit defendants, and prejudice in ongoing or future judicial proceedings, particularly in political cases.

These concerns are exacerbated by restrictions on access to legal counsel. Under Judiciary regulations, detainees may be required to select a lawyer from a limited, pre-approved list, thereby undermining the right to freely choose counsel and to effectively prepare a defense. In cases related to previous protests, particularly during the 1401 “Woman, Life, Freedom” protests, it has been reported that forced confessions formed the basis for heavy sentences, including long-term imprisonment and, in some cases, the death penalty. This documented history intensifies the foreseeable legal consequences of the confessions broadcast during the current period.

Legal Implications in the Framework of Crimes Against Humanity

The repeated use of forced confessions, including their public broadcast through state-affiliated media, may be relevant to an assessment of crimes against humanity when considered in the broader context of repression and abuse directed against protestors and other civilians. While the use of forced confessions alone is not determinative of the contextual elements of crimes against humanity, their coordinated nature may serve as evidence of an organized practice linked to state authorities.

In particular, the use and dissemination of forced confessions may support findings related to the existence of an underlying state policy, the organized character of the abuses, and the knowledge and intent of relevant officials, when assessed alongside other acts contributing to an alleged widespread or systematic attack against a civilian population.

Consequences and Damages

Violence and Property Damage

During the protests, in addition to human casualties, numerous reports emerged regarding damage to public property, urban infrastructure, government facilities, religious sites, and service centers across various parts of the country. The majority of these reports were released by judicial authorities, municipal officials, and media outlets affiliated with state institutions.

Regarding damage to emergency service fleets, while earlier reports cited a total of 182 ambulances damaged nationwide, the Secretary of the National Security Council later stated that 305 ambulances and buses had been damaged. In more recent remarks, the spokesperson for the Judiciary reported damage to 350 ambulances and buses. Additionally, in a separate statement, some officials put the number of damaged ambulances at approximately 100. This stark discrepancy among official figures raises serious doubts about the accuracy and reliability of data released by government institutions.

Even greater contradictions are evident in the statistics reported regarding Tehran. At one point, Alireza Zakani, the Mayor of Tehran, reported damage to 43 city buses, 54 bus stations, and 25 fire engines. In a separate statement, Zakani cited 89 damaged buses in Tehran and referred to the burning of two municipal districts. In the latest remarks, the spokesperson for Tehran Municipality announced that 55 buses had been destroyed, many of which were reportedly recoverable, and noted that one of the completely destroyed vehicles was an electric bus. The official also reported the complete destruction of 37 Bus Rapid Transit (BRT) stations and damage, both partial and total, to more than 300 regular bus stops. These figures differ significantly from previously announced statistics regarding the number of damaged stations.

In the same report, the spokesperson for Tehran Municipality also stated that more than 1,000 traffic lights had been damaged, with over 120 of them completely destroyed. He further announced that 53 light, semi-heavy, and heavy fire service vehicles had sustained damage, eight of which were entirely destroyed. The total damage to fire department vehicles was estimated at approximately 800 billion tomans.

Additionally, reports indicated significant damage to four metro station entrances, including unauthorized entry into the ticketing hall of one station.

The Governor of Tehran also reported damage to commercial and residential units, buses, ambulances, and fire service vehicles, as well as damage to 44 mosques and religious congregational centers (hosseiniyehs). However, the head of Tehran's Seminary Centers stated that 65 mosques had been damaged and also referred to damage to several seminaries. This discrepancy in the reported figures concerning religious sites constitutes yet another clear example of contradiction within the official narrative.

At the national level as well, official claims have been both extensive and contradictory. Previously, authorities reported total damages estimated between 800 and 1,000 billion tomans, stating that approximately 750 banks, 1,400 ATMs, 253 bus stations, around 100 city buses, 30 fire service vehicles, 749 police vehicles, 800 private vehicles, 300 residential homes, 700 shops, 24 fuel stations, 414 government centers, 120 Basij bases, 89 seminaries, and at least 350 mosques had been damaged or destroyed.

In the most recent statement by the Judiciary spokesperson, citing a “report by the Judiciary’s Lawyers’ Center” and “assessments by certified experts,” the preliminary estimate of damage to urban infrastructure in 21 cities across the country was announced at approximately 10,000 billion tomans. In this latest report, the damaged properties were listed as including 414 government buildings, 749 police stations, 750 bank branches, 600 ATMs, and 120 Basij centers.

This is despite earlier accounts that had placed the number of damaged ATMs at 1,400, a figure now reduced to 600. Such discrepancies indicate that even official statistics lack internal consistency.

The Judiciary spokesperson also stated that damages to private property included 300 residential units, 700 local shops, 800 private vehicles, and 350 mosques, figures that overlap with portions of the previously reported statistics. The official emphasized that these data represent a “preliminary estimate” and that supplementary reports would be released at a later stage. Consistent with this official narrative, earlier reports citing 3,000 billion tomans in damage to municipal property and urban services, 2,100 billion tomans in losses to banks, and 1,000 billion tomans in damage to the electricity sector remain in circulation.

Additionally, reports have indicated damage to 364 large retail stores across 30 provinces, the destruction of 265 educational centers, the burning of several libraries, and damage to at least eight registered cultural heritage sites, including the Museum of Eminent Figures at Ferdowsi University of Mashhad.

In the education sector, statistical inconsistencies persist. The Minister of Education reported that approximately 250 schools had been damaged, while some security officials put the number at 200 educational institutions.

At the provincial level, earlier in Kermanshah, the Director General of the Provincial Security and Law Enforcement Office announced a preliminary estimate of more than 1,200 billion tomans in damages. He stated that seven bank branches had been completely destroyed, and 32 others had sustained damage. He also reported that hospitals and ambulances had been damaged in at least three instances, and that 16 government offices had incurred losses.

In his latest remarks, the Judiciary spokesperson presented itemized provincial damage estimates. According to these figures, Gilan sustained the highest reported losses at 10,000 billion tomans, followed by Isfahan with 3,300 billion tomans, Alborz with 2,500 billion tomans, the city of Tehran with 2,500 billion tomans, Fars with 2,100 billion tomans, Ilam with 2,000 billion tomans, Mazandaran and Markazi each with 1,500 billion tomans, and Khuzestan, Golestan, and Hamadan each with 1,000 billion tomans in damages.

However, in another part of his statement, the spokesperson cited Isfahan’s losses as 0.3 300 billion tomans, a figure that directly contradicts the previously stated 3,300 billion tomans. This discrepancy indicates that even within a single official source, the statistics lack stability and internal consistency.

Regarding Tehran, the spokesperson stated that municipal damages amounted to approximately 250 billion tomans. In addition, religious sites, urban services, and the transportation sector were each said to have incurred 400 billion tomans in damages. It was further reported that district municipal buildings in Tehran sustained a total of 9 billion tomans in losses, while technical damages to the municipality were estimated at 50 billion tomans, details that were absent from earlier accounts and appear to have been added progressively to the reported figures over time.

Human and Financial Losses

In addition to the deaths of many protesters, the violent crackdown resulted in widespread injuries among citizens across various parts of the country. According to reports and documentation obtained from local sources, social media, and direct accounts received by HRANA, a significant portion of these injuries occurred as a result of protesters being beaten with batons, machetes, and knives; the use of electric stun guns; and the deployment of various weapons, including pepper spray, tear gas, pellet-firing shotguns, plastic bullets, and in some cases live military-grade firearms, particularly handguns.

Within this context, a significant number of images and videos have been circulated showing identifiable law enforcement officers directly using handguns against protesters. According to this evidence, the majority of forces present at the scenes belonged to various units of the Law Enforcement Command of the Islamic Republic of Iran (FARAJA), particularly the Special Units, while Basij forces were also among the principal institutions involved in the suppression of the protests.

Alongside the street-level suppression of protesters, numerous reports have also emerged of the widespread arrest of demonstrators. According to information received by HRANA, hundreds of detainees, many in poor physical condition and bearing visible signs of beatings, were transferred to prisons including Qarchak (Varamin), Tehran Greater Prison, Evin, Vakilabad (Mashhad), Ilam, and other detention facilities across the country.

Killings and Lethal Violence

1. Scale of Fatalities and Composition of Victims

During the recent protests, a total of 7,007 confirmed deaths were recorded. This figure comprises four distinct categories:

- 6,488 deceased protesters
- 236 children (not included in the 6,488 protesters)

- 207 military–government personnel
- 76 non-protesting civilians

The precise disaggregation of these figures carries analytical significance. Protesters constitute the overwhelming majority of the fatalities. The separate documentation of 236 children indicates that underage victims were recorded independently and not merged into the overall protester count. The inclusion of military–government personnel and non-protesting civilians provides a more comprehensive picture of the human toll of the confrontations.

In addition to these confirmed figures, 11,744 cases remain under review, at the time of writing, as their verification process has not yet been completed. These cases are not included in the total of 7,007 confirmed deaths.

Various media outlets and groups have presented differing estimates of the scale of the killings. In the absence of sufficient transparency from the Iranian government, the conditions have allowed for the circulation of divergent statistics. In this report, HRANA emphasizes that the figures presented represent the minimum number of confirmed cases. The actual death toll may be significantly higher than the numbers documented by this organization.

2. Geographic Distribution of Fatalities

Fatalities have been recorded in all 31 provinces of the country. However, the statistical concentration is significantly higher in certain provinces. The ten provinces with the highest number of recorded deaths are as follows:

- Location unspecified (primarily derived from official or internal reports): 1,802
- Tehran: 1,588
- Isfahan: 753
- Razavi Khorasan: 622
- Gilan: 419
- Kermanshah: 395
- Alborz: 325
- Fars: 148
- Ilam: 134
- Lorestan: 132
- Khozestan: 117

Another 572 fatalities are distributed across 21 other provinces of the country.

The registration of 1,802 cases with an unspecified location reflects informational limitations in a portion of the files. These cases involve individuals whose deaths have been confirmed, but for whom precise geographic data has not been made available.

With 1,588 recorded fatalities, Tehran has the highest figure among identified provinces. It is followed by Isfahan, Alborz, and Razavi Khorasan. The high concentration of deaths in these provinces is analytically consistent with their role as major centers of protest activity.

3. Fatalities in Relation to the Pattern of Protests

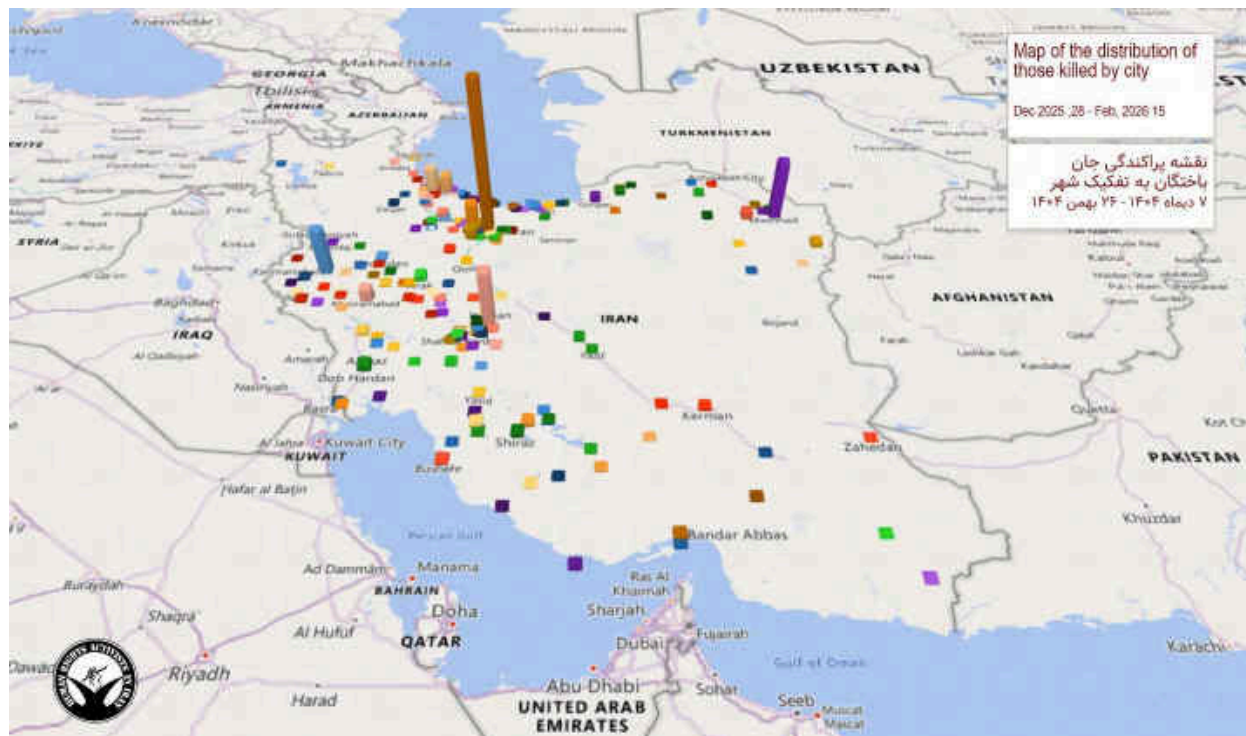

Protests were recorded at 682 protest sites across 203 cities in all 31 provinces of the country. This geographical breadth, alongside the figure of 7,007 confirmed deaths, indicates that the fatalities occurred within the context of a nationwide protest wave.

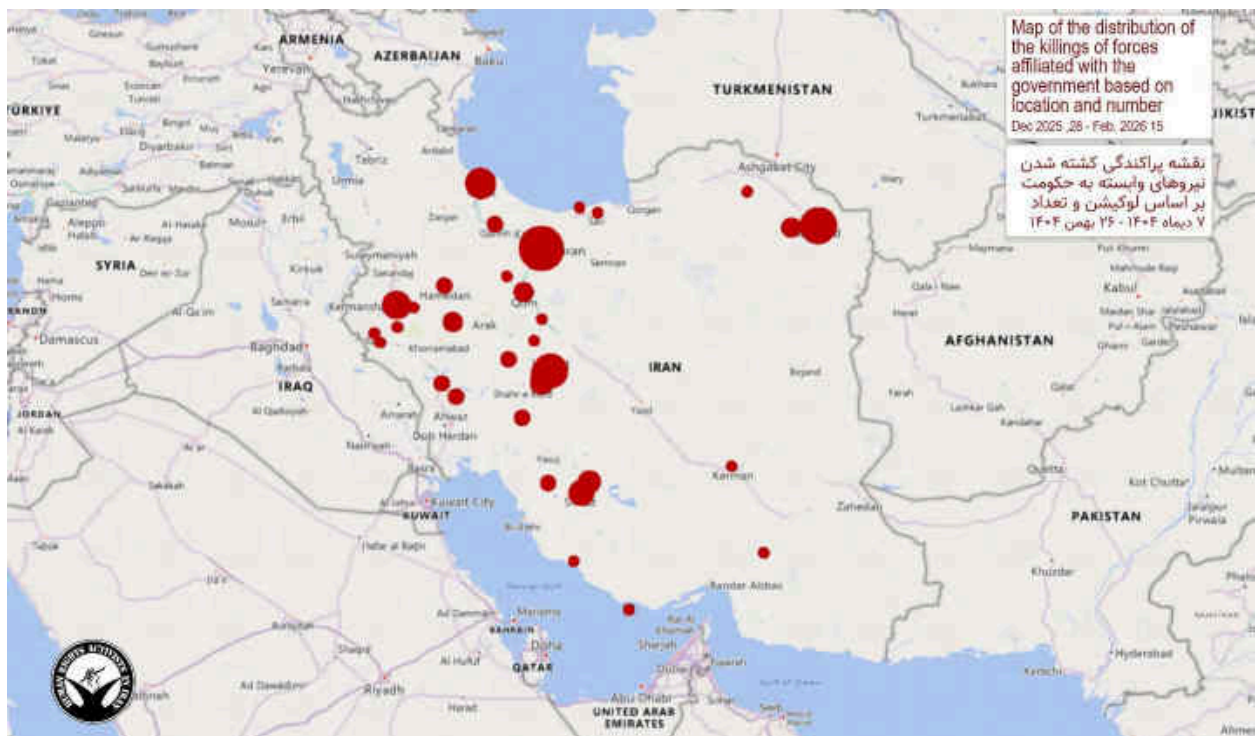

Given the trajectory of the protests, from an initial phase characterized by economic and occupational grievances to a more explicitly anti-government and structurally confrontational phase, the rise in fatalities can be analyzed within the framework of escalating confrontation between protesters and security forces. In certain provinces, particularly in the initial epicenters and in areas experiencing heightened tensions, the level of conflict was more intense, a factor reflected in the statistical concentration of deaths.

5. Conclusion

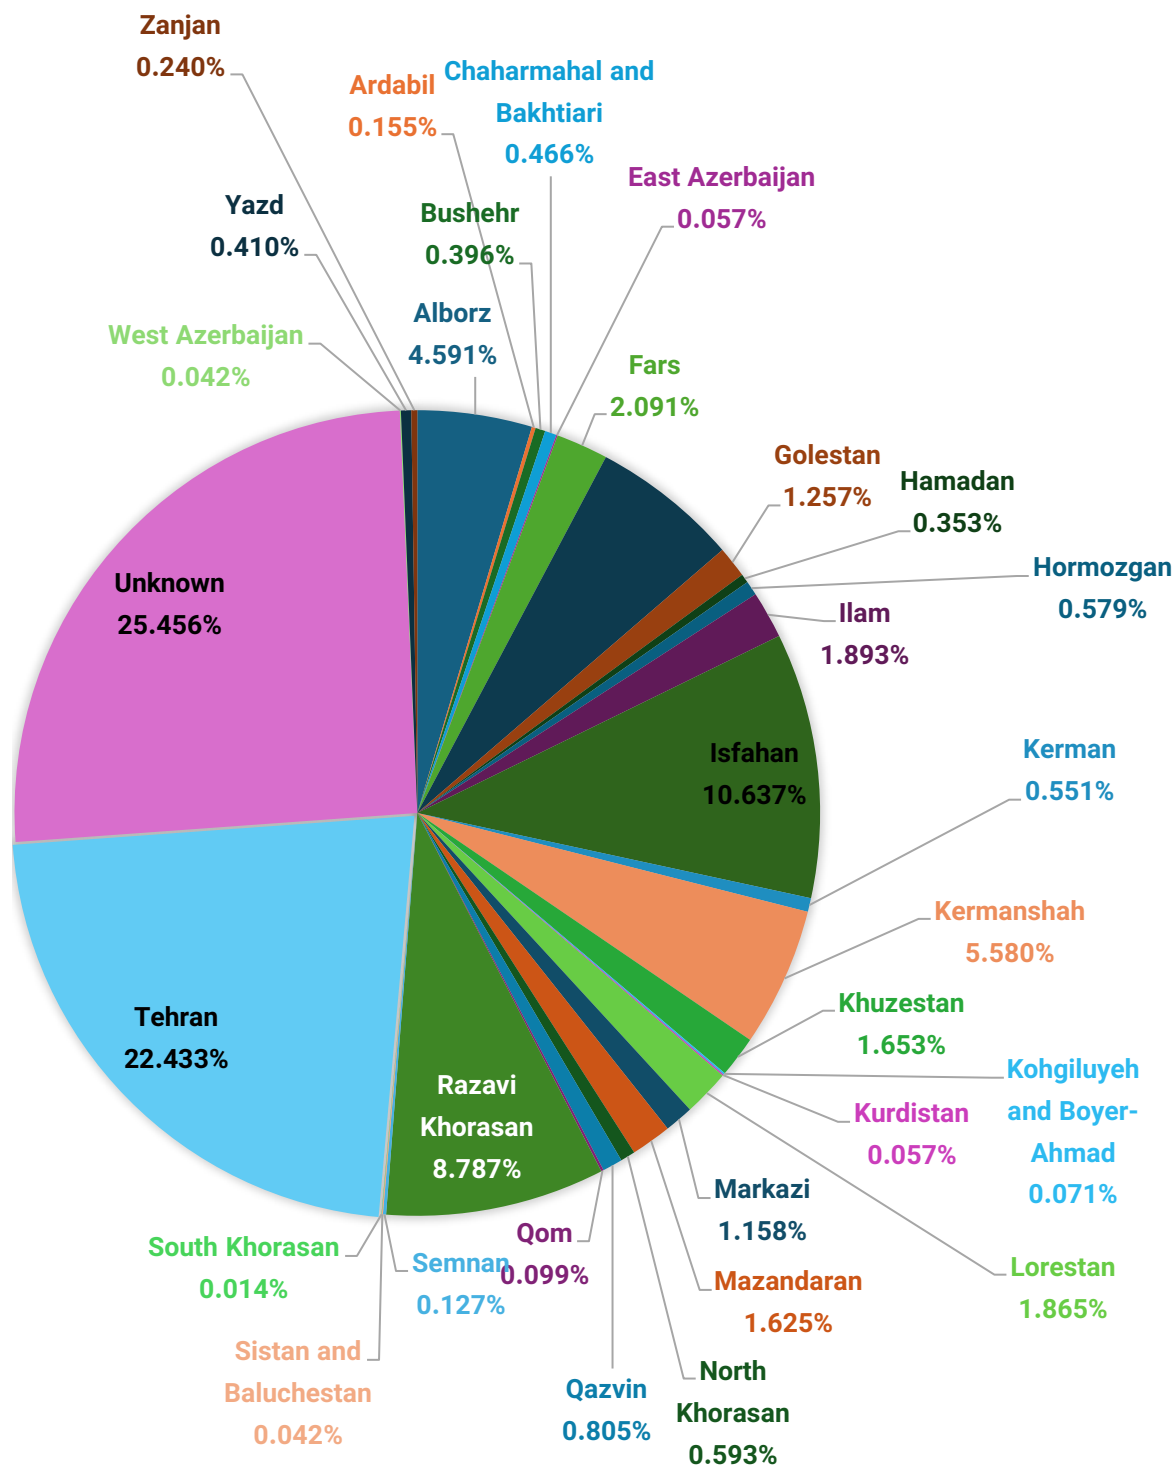

The figure of 7,007 confirmed deaths, alongside 11,744 cases still under review, presents a picture of one of the most extensive periods of human loss in recent years. The distribution of fatalities across all 31 provinces, the registration of 682 protest sites in 203 cities, and the statistical concentration in the top ten provinces indicate that these deaths occurred within the framework of a nationwide protest wave and amid widespread security confrontations.

The statistical disaggregation of victims into protesters, children, military–government personnel, and non-protesting civilians provides a transparent framework for analyzing the human dimensions of these events. The available data indicate that the majority of fatalities were protesters and that the geographic scope of the violence extended throughout the country.

PROVINCES' SHARE OF THE NUMBER OF FATALITIES BASED ON PERCENTAGE

The injured and summonses

According to a consolidated review of received reports, at least 30,761 individuals were injured during the recent protests. Of these, 4,884 were military or security personnel and 25,846 were civilians. An additional 31 injured individuals were not classified as protesters, including members of emergency response teams and medical personnel.

During the same period, at least 11,053 individuals were summoned to predominantly security bodies, and in some cases judicial authorities, where they were subjected to threats or compelled to sign written undertakings. Reports further indicate that digital devices belonging to some of those summoned were confiscated, and a number of social media accounts were suspended or seized.

Widespread Individual and Group Arrests

1. Number of Arrests

During this period of protests, a total of 53,777 individuals were arrested. This figure has been finalized based on thousands of reports collected from various sources, after consolidation and the removal of potential duplicate cases. It represents the minimum confirmed number of arrests.

Of the total 53,777 detainees:

- 3,195 individuals have been identified on a case-by-case basis;
- 50,582 individuals have been confirmed as part of group arrests, without access to their individual identities.

Individual arrests refer to cases in which the name, personal details, and supplementary information of the detainee have been recorded and verified. Group arrests refer to cases in which credible sources have confirmed the arrest of a number of individuals and have reported the total figure, but the list of detainees' names is not available. For example, reports from certain prisons regarding the transfer of hundreds of detainees to a specific facility, where the number was documented but the identities of each individual were not accessible.

2. Geographic Scope of the Arrests

Arrests were recorded in all 31 provinces of the country, and no province was without detainees during this period. However, the statistical concentration was significantly higher in certain provinces.

The ten provinces with the highest number of arrests are as follows:

1. Tehran: 13,021 individuals
2. Alborz: 6,211 individuals

3. Lorestan: 4,187 individuals
4. Khorasan Razavi: 3,464 individuals
5. Gilan: 2,506 individuals
6. Hamedan: 1,527 individuals
7. Isfahan: 1,467 individuals
8. West Azerbaijan: 1,441 individuals
9. Ilam: 1,334 individuals
10. Kerman: 1,104 individuals

Additionally, 5,062 cases were recorded under the category of “unspecified location.”

The concentration of 19,232 arrests in Tehran and Alborz reflects the significant share of the capital and its surrounding areas in this wave of arrests. Lorestan and Khorasan Razavi rank next, indicating the intensity of security responses in these regions. At the same time, the registration of arrests across all provinces demonstrates that the arrest policy had a fully nationwide scope.

3. Professional Composition of Identified Detainees

Among the 3,195 identified cases, the following professional composition has been recorded:

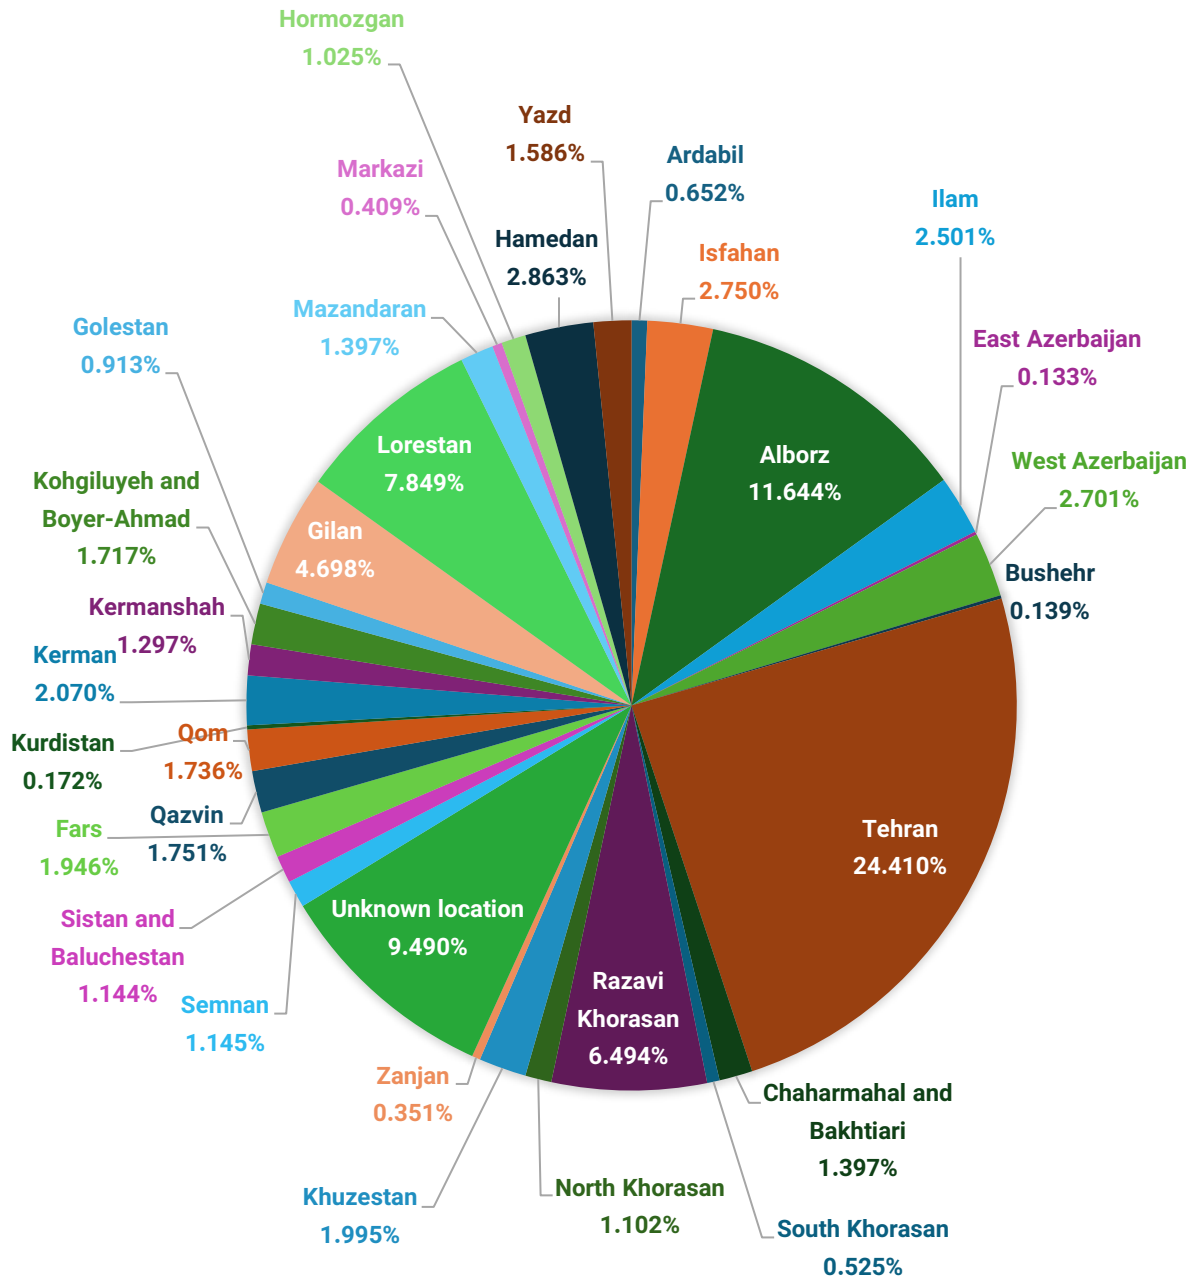

- 6 journalists
- 27 medical personnel
- 73 civil activists
- 84 teachers

These data indicate that the arrests were not limited solely to participants in street gatherings; professional groups and socially influential figures were also among those detained.

4. Arrest of Students and Universities

During this period, 36 universities across various parts of the country witnessed protests, and 55 university gatherings were recorded. The arrest of students within this context indicates a focus on suppressing active social hubs and reducing the capacity for organization within university environments.

Legal Assessment and International Implications

Preliminary Legal Assessment

Drawing on HRA’s established expertise in identifying recurring patterns of State repression in Iran, the following assessment is offered on a preliminary basis while events remain ongoing. All findings and legal characterizations should be understood as provisional and subject to update as HRA continues to document, verify, and analyze emerging information at the time of writing.

Since the onset of protests on December 28, 2025, HRA has documented patterns of serious human rights violations and potential crimes under international law. HRA assesses that the violent crackdown carried out by Iranian authorities against protesters likely meets the threshold of crimes against humanity under Article 7 of the Rome Statute, reflecting customary international law binding on all States.

The contextual threshold for crimes against humanity requires that the underlying acts be committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population and carried out pursuant to or in furtherance of State policy. HRA’s verified data and research support this assessment based on the following findings:

- Scale of killings and injuries: 7,007 confirmed deaths as of 15 Feb 2026, including a large majority of killings occurring during the January 8-9 period alone, indicating that an attack occurred.
- Scale of arrests and detentions: 53,777 individuals arrested and detained
- Systematic broadcast of forced confessions: 369 aired on State television, and associated media platforms, representing an unprecedented number.
- Civilian character of the victims: victims were predominantly peaceful protesters.
- Widespread geographic scope: lethal use of force and widespread violence documented across every province and in more than 203 cities.
- Recurring patterns of unlawful use of force, including deployment of military-grade weapons and violent crowd dispersal tactics against civilians.
- Evidence of coordinated State response: official statements and institutional coordination, authorization, direction, and encouragement by State authorities.

The commission of crimes against humanity further requires that the attack be carried out with knowledge of the broader attack against a civilian population. Such intent and knowledge may be inferred from relevant facts and circumstances. HRA assesses that this mental element is satisfied in the present case, based on directives and public statements issued by State authorities, which demonstrate awareness of, and coordination in, the repression of civilian protesters.

The pattern of conduct observed is, in some ways, consistent with prior protest crackdowns, including during the 2022 “Women, Life, Freedom” movement. In that context, the UN Fact-Finding Mission concluded that “relevant State entities generally knew that there was an attack directed against the civilian population and that their acts were part of that attack, or they at least knowingly took the risk of participating in the implementation thereof.” The recurrence of similar methods, structures, and public messaging further supports the inference that State actors acted with the requisite knowledge and intent.

Accordingly, HRA’s preliminary analysis finds that violations in the context of protest suppression were neither spontaneous nor isolated but formed part of a widespread and systematic attack against a civilian population, carried out pursuant to, or in furtherance of, Iranian State policy. This is a policy HRA has documented extensively, and can therefore rely on a system analysis.

On this basis, the following underlying acts constituting crimes against humanity are assessed as likely to have been committed:

Murder (Article 7(1)(a), Rome Statute: HRA has documented the intentional killing of civilians through the consistent use of live ammunition, sniper fire, birdshot, and heavy weaponry deployed against protesters. The repeated use of both targeted and indiscriminate lethal force against unarmed individuals, including close-range shootings and the firing of live rounds into crowds, demonstrates either a direct intent to kill or, at a minimum, knowledge that death would be the likely and foreseeable consequence of such actions.

Under international human rights standards, lethal force may only be used as a last resort and strictly when necessary to protect life. It can never be lawfully used to disperse protesters or suppress dissent. The deliberate use of lethal force documented during these protests is incompatible with any lawful law enforcement framework. It constitutes arbitrary deprivations of life in violation of Article 6 of the ICCPR and amounts to extrajudicial executions under international human rights law.

When assessed in conjunction with the nationwide scope of the crackdown, the coordinated deployment of security forces, and the volume of fatalities recorded within compressed timeframes, including the high number of civilian deaths reported during the 8–9 January period alone, the evidence supports the conclusion that the killings were carried out as part of a widespread and systematic attack directed against a civilian population pursuant to State policy.

HRA has further verified at least 236 child fatalities in the context of protest suppression, underscoring the gravity and indiscriminate nature of the violence. The killing of children reinforces the conclusion that authorities failed to exercise the heightened restraint and special protections required under international law. In contravention of Iran’s obligations under the Convention on the Rights of the Child, as well as customary norms, including the requirement that the best interests of the child be a primary consideration, security forces did not distinguish between children and adults in their use of lethal force against protesters.

Where the scale of killing reaches particularly high levels within a short period of time, the conduct may additionally satisfy the threshold for extermination under Article 7(1)(b) of the Rome Statute.

In addition to murder, preliminary analysis indicates the commission of other potential crimes against humanity, including, at a minimum:

Torture and other inhumane acts (Article 7(1)(f) and (k)): HRA has documented a longstanding pattern of torture and other cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment in the repression of protests in Iran. In the current context, credible reports indicate that detainees have been subjected to physical and psychological abuse, including for the purpose of extracting televised confessions. Despite the ongoing information blackout, the systematic broadcast of confessions, combined with documented patterns from prior protest crackdowns, strongly suggests that such statements were coerced.

Where intentionally inflicted as part of a widespread or systematic attack, such conduct may constitute torture or other inhumane acts as crimes against humanity, in addition to violations of international human rights law.

The prohibition of torture is absolute. Statements obtained through torture or ill-treatment must be excluded from criminal proceedings, except where introduced as evidence that torture occurred. Any death sentence imposed following proceedings tainted by torture or violations of fair trial guarantees under Article 14 of the ICCPR would constitute an arbitrary deprivation of life.

Imprisonment or other severe deprivation of physical liberty (Article 7(1)(e)): The large-scale and arbitrary arrest and detention of protesters amounting to more than 53,777, carried out without due process or lawful basis, may amount to imprisonment as a crime against humanity. The volume of detentions and their nationwide distribution indicate that such deprivation of liberty was not isolated but formed part of a broader attack against civilians. These arrests are ongoing at the time of writing.

Prior documentation of the relevant patterns of conduct indicates that the authorities have used forced confessions as a basis for detention and sentencing in numerous cases. In this regard, the Independent International Fact-Finding Mission on the Islamic Republic of Iran, in its reporting on the 2022 protests, found that proceedings before Revolutionary Courts demonstrate a pattern of non-compliance with internationally recognized fair trial standards. The Mission investigated multiple cases in which judges knowingly relied on “confessions” and other evidence tainted by torture to issue convictions and impose prison or death sentences, while denying defendants fair trial guarantees.

Against this backdrop, the unprecedented number of forced confessions reported in connection with the events underscores the continued intent to employ such practices. The use of forced confessions violates fundamental rules of international law. Moreover, the involvement of prison authorities and the judiciary, who were aware that the detentions occurred in the context of civilian protests, supports an inference that the requisite knowledge and intent for crimes against humanity are satisfied.

Other inhumane acts (Article 7(1)(k)): Reports of mutilation, desecration, or obstruction of access to victims’ bodies may constitute other inhumane acts where such conduct causes severe physical or mental suffering to victims’ families and communities. When carried out as part of a widespread or systematic attack against a civilian population, such acts may satisfy the threshold for crimes against humanity.

Sanctions and Intensified International Pressure Against the Islamic Republic

Following continued international reactions to the suppression of protests in Iran, several Western governments imposed a new set of targeted sanctions against officials and institutions of the Islamic Republic.

These sanctions have targeted individuals and entities that, according to the sanctioning governments, played a role in the suppression of protests, widespread human rights violations, or cooperation with the Islamic Republic's security and military networks.

The U.S. Department of the Treasury announced that it has placed 12 officials and entities of the Islamic Republic on its new sanctions list. Among the newly added names is Ali Larijani, Secretary of Iran's Supreme National Security Council. According to the U.S. government, these individuals and entities have either played a role in the suppression of protests and widespread human rights violations or maintain ties to the Islamic Republic's security and military networks.

In Europe, the European Union announced on Thursday, January 29, that it had adopted a resolution to designate the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps (IRGC) as a terrorist organization. On that date, Kaja Kallas, the EU's High Representative for Foreign Affairs, described the move as "decisive" and stated that the foreign ministers of EU member states had taken an important decision to include the IRGC on the list. The resolution was adopted weeks later in mid-February of 2026.

Previously, in response to the bloody crackdown on protesters in Iran, the European Union had also imposed new sanctions against several senior officials. The Council of the European Union announced that these sanctions target Eskandar Momeni, Minister of Interior; Mohammad Movahedi Azad, Attorney General; and Iman Afshari, Judge of Branch 26 of the Tehran Revolutionary Court. In its statement, the Council said that all three individuals have been involved "violent repression of peaceful protests and the arbitrary arrest of political activists and human rights defenders."

The Australian government also announced that, in response to the "regime's horrific use of violence against its own people," it has imposed targeted financial sanctions on 20 individuals and three entities affiliated with the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps (IRGC).

The United Kingdom's Foreign, Commonwealth & Development Office likewise announced that it has added the Islamic Republic's Law Enforcement Command and 10 Iranian officials to its sanctions list. In its statement, the ministry said that the Law Enforcement Command of the Islamic Republic is "accountable for a number of serious human rights violations."

The Canadian government also reported the imposition of new sanctions against the Islamic Republic. Under this decision, seven individuals have been placed on the sanctions list. According to Canadian officials, these individuals are connected to Iranian state institutions and have played roles in repression, acts of violence, and transnational pressure against opponents and human rights defenders.

Taken together, these measures reflect increased coordination among Western countries in response to what has been described as widespread human rights violations and the suppression of protests in Iran.

Reactions

Reactions

With the outbreak and continuation of protests, strikes, and nightly gatherings, officials of the Iranian government, including security institutions, the judiciary, and political figures, issued a range of official statements. Foreign governments, prominent international political figures, various civil groups, international and human rights organizations, activists, and other public figure also reacted to these events, expressing their support and solidarity with the protesters. What follows is a non-exhaustive list of some of the most significant reactions to the recent protests. In addition to those reactions listed, which are not exhaustive, a number of prominent international figures from around the globe, including singers, actors, and other notable public personalities, expressed solidarity with Iranians through various online platforms. In Support of the Protests

International Reactions

During the protests, the escalation of violence by security and law enforcement forces against protestors sparked widespread international concern. The following is a summary of reactions from a number of international actors and observers regarding the protests and their violent suppression.

Human Rights Organizations, Multilateral Institutions and Notable Figures

Six days after the protests began, numerous reports emerged of shootings, arrests, and a heavy security atmosphere in various cities across Iran. At the time, Volker Türk, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, expressed concern over developments in Iran, stating that he was following reports of violence against protesters “closely.” He called on Iranian authorities to respect citizens’ fundamental rights, including freedom of expression, peaceful assembly, and association. He also called for all deaths to be promptly, independently, and transparently investigated. In a subsequent step, the UN official issued a written statement expressing “horror” at the Islamic Republic’s suppression of nationwide protests, warning: “the killing of peaceful demonstrators must stop, and the labelling of protesters as ‘terrorists’ to justify violence against them is unacceptable.” In another part of his remarks, Türk called for an end to all forms of violence and repression against protesters and for the full restoration of internet and telecommunications services: “Iranians’ grievances must be heard and addressed, and ‘not instrumentalized by anyone.” Mai Sato, the United Nations Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in Iran, also warned about the intensification of the crackdown on protesters by security forces in various parts of the country. She stated that signs of an expanding violent response could be observed throughout the country. Emphasizing the necessity of respecting citizens’ fundamental rights, the UN official called on Iran’s authorities to uphold freedom of expression, freedom of association, and the right to peaceful assembly, and to refrain from using violent force against protesters. Sato also warned that a repetition of violent measures similar to those carried out during the “Woman, Life, Freedom” movement could have serious and destructive consequences for the country’s civic space. Ms. Sato stressed that citizens must have the right to engage in peaceful protest without fear of repression.

She, along with other United Nations experts, also condemned the nationwide internet blackout in Iran. In her view, this measure was deliberate and aimed at concealing violence against protesting citizens, and the use of dangerous labels against peaceful protesters, such as “terrorist,” “rioter,” or “mercenary”, served solely to justify harsh repression.

At the same time as reports emerged regarding the Iranian government’s plans to execute protesters, Ms. Sato, in a message published on the social media platform X, expressed concern over the use of the death penalty as a tool to suppress popular protests in Iran. In that message, she stressed that threatening to carry out executions or issuing a death sentence against a protester constitutes an unlawful act, describing it as a clear indication of the Islamic Republic’s disregard for freedom of assembly and freedom of expression.

Mai Sato also stated that an independent investigation to examine whether “crimes against humanity” have occurred in Iran was essential. She also expressed concern over the rising number of those killed: “some estimates put the civilian death toll at about 5,000 or more, and medical reports suggest that the figure could be around 20,000 or more.”

Amnesty International, expressing grave concern over reports of protesters being killed in Iran, called on the authorities of the Islamic Republic to respect the rights to freedom of expression and peaceful assembly and to refrain from using violence and unlawful lethal force against protesters. The organization described the attack by security forces on a hospital in Ilam, where injured protesters had gathered to receive medical treatment or seek refuge, as a clear violation of international law, demonstrating that the authorities recognize no limits in suppressing protests and silencing dissent.

In response to the widespread crackdown on protests across Iran, Amnesty International issued an urgent action to collect and document evidence of human rights violations and crimes against protesters. The statement “reiterates its calls for urgent global diplomatic action, warning of the risk of further bloodshed amid the internet blackout providing cover for security forces who commit grave violations.”

António Guterres, the UN Secretary-General, also responded to the protests, stating that he was following developments in Iran “with concern” and was “deeply saddened” by the killing and injury of protesters. Emphasizing “the need to prevent any further casualties,” he called on the Iranian authorities to “uphold the right of freedom of expression, association and peaceful assembly.”

World Iranian Christian Alliance, in a published statement, expressed its “deep concern over the suppression of nationwide protests.” The statement read: “As the evidence clearly indicates, these protests are not merely a response to economic hardships people face, but are rooted in a systematic absence of justice and reflect a far deeper crisis. The right to protest peacefully is a fundamental right of citizens who find themselves alienated from—or deprived of—justice, human dignity, and meaningful participation in determining their own future.”

The “Yek Kalameh” Lawyers Network, an independent global network composed of a group of Iranian-origin human rights lawyers, called on the international community and international institutions to use diplomatic and legal mechanisms to prevent repression in response to the widespread internet shutdown and the Islamic Republic's efforts to isolate protesters. Part of the statement read: "These brutal crimes have been carried out under the cover of a nationwide internet shutdown and away from the eyes of the world, and under international law, they constitute clear instances of crimes against humanity. Those who ordered and carried out these killings must be prosecuted, tried, and punished. In the event of a change in Iran's political system, the future government must immediately accede to the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court to enable international adjudication of the crimes committed."

The Narges Mohammadi Foundation, in a published statement, declared that "standing with the people of Iran is not a political choice but a human and moral duty." In another statement, it said: "The people of Iran possess an inalienable right to live freely with dignity, security, and prosperity. Central to these rights is the right to self-determination, which can be realized through a free, fair, and internationally supervised referendum, directly reflecting the genuine will of the people." The foundation called on the United Nations, international and independent human rights bodies, and democratic governments to take immediate and effective action to stop the repression, killings, mass arrests, and executions in Iran.

The United Nations Independent International Fact-Finding Mission, in a published statement referring to the wave of violent repression against protesters, called on the Iranian government to immediately restore internet and mobile communications and to end the violent suppression of the ongoing protests. The statement noted that the Mission is concerned about reports indicating that orders to crack down had been issued to security institutions.

Malala Yousafzai, the Nobel Peace Prize laureate, also responded to the protests in Iran, stating that the demonstrations "cannot be separated from the long-standing, state-imposed restrictions on girls' and women's autonomy in all areas of public life, including education." She added, "Iranian girls, like girls everywhere, demand a life of dignity."

A statement issued by the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) also expressed concern over the killing and injury of children and adolescents during the nationwide protests and called for immediate measures to protect children. More specifically, Edouard Beigbeder, UNICEF Regional Director for the Middle East and North Africa, described the continued reports of children being harmed during the protests as deeply alarming. Emphasizing that children must be protected from all forms of violence and harm, he called on the authorities of the Islamic Republic, security forces, protesters, families, and the broader community to take all necessary measures to safeguard children. Beigbeder stressed that security forces must refrain from using "unnecessary or disproportionate force." It is worth noting that Iran, as a signatory to the Convention on the Rights of the Child, is obligated to protect children's right to life.

In another response, the statement of Education International strongly condemned the violent repression of protesting citizens in Iran, stating: "We are deeply alarmed by reports of mass repression and killings, including students and children, with security forces reportedly firing live ammunition at people in the streets."

In a separate response, a group of 60 lawyers from bar associations in Iran, the United States, Germany, France, Turkey, and Ukraine, wrote to António Guterres, the United Nations Secretary-General, calling for the activation of the “Responsibility to Protect” framework. They also urged the United Nations to safeguard the people of Iran.

Meanwhile, 57 Iranian and non-Iranian international legal scholars addressed a letter to Volker Türk, the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, describing the ongoing situation in Iran as grave and calling on him to give the matter special attention.

Human Rights Watch, citing reports of protesters being killed and mass arrests in Iran, called for an emergency meeting of the United Nations Security Council. Philippe Boloipon, the organization’s Executive Director, urged both the Security Council and the Human Rights Council to address the matter without delay.

In one of the most significant reactions, the United Nations Human Rights Council announced that it would convene a special session on the situation in Iran. Twenty-one countries supported the holding of this session, during which discussions addressed the alarming violence committed against protesters and the possibility of establishing new monitoring and investigative mechanisms. In a letter sent to the President of the Human Rights Council, these countries referred to reports of alarming violence, repression of protesters, and violations of international human rights law across Iran.

The Germany-based non-governmental organization Sea-Watch, in a message posted on social media, expressed its support for the protests of the Iranian people and their movement toward freedom, justice, and the right to self-determination. Sea-Watch, which has been active in search and rescue operations for refugees in the Mediterranean Sea since 2015, wrote in its message: “We stand with the people of Iran in their struggle against repression.”

The World Health Organization condemned attacks on hospitals and medical personnel in Iran. On January 29, 2026, Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus, Director-General of the World Health Organization, wrote in a post on the social media platform X: “I am deeply concerned by multiple reports of health personnel and medical facilities in Iran being impacted by the recent insecurity, and prevented from delivering their essential services to people requiring care... I call for the release of any health worker in detention. Healthcare personnel should never face intimidation.”

At the annual meeting of the FNV Women’s Organization in the Netherlands, the country’s largest trade union federation, solidarity and sympathy with the people of Iran, particularly women, were expressed, and the repression, killings, mass arrests, and severe pressure on women, workers, and social activists were condemned.

Foreign Governments, Political Figures, and Institutions

On the ninth day of the protests, Donald Trump, the President of the United States, once again warned the Iranian government about the use of violence against protesters. He stated that “if they start killing people, which they tend to do during their riots, they have lots of riots. If they do it, we're going to hit them very hard,” On several occasions, Trump spoke about the possibility of a strong response in the event of protesters being killed, and claimed that some of the deaths had resulted from overcrowding.

In another reaction to the protests, referring to the situation in Iran, US President Donald Trump said: “All I can say is you should feel strongly about freedom. There’s nothing like freedom. You’re brave people.”

In a further response during a press conference at the White House, US President Donald Trump stated: “In my opinion, the people are taking control of some cities. ... We will strike very hard where it hurts the most; a very severe blow to their most sensitive point.” He also wrote in a brief message posted on his social media platform, Truth Social, on Saturday, January 10: “Iran is looking at FREEDOM, perhaps like never before. The USA stands ready to help!!!”

As the deadly crackdown on popular protests in Iran continued, he announced that the United States was reviewing “very strong options” for intervention in the country. He warned the Islamic Republic that if it executed protesters, it would face a “very decisive” response.

Also, on Tuesday, January 13, in a post on Truth Social, US President Donald Trump wrote: “Iranian Patriots, KEEP PROTESTING — TAKE OVER YOUR INSTITUTIONS!!! Save the names of the killers and abusers. They will pay a very big price. I have cancelled all meetings with Iranian officials until the senseless killing of protesters stops. HELP IS ON ITS WAY. MIGA!!!”

The U.S. Department of State, in a statement published on its official page, declared that on the thirteenth day of the protests, Iranians had united and were calling for change. However, the Islamic Republic’s response, it said, had been internet shutdowns, violence against the people, and accusing protesters of foreign affiliation.

Marco Rubio, the United States Secretary of State, also expressed support for the Iranian people’s protests in a post on the social media platform X, writing: “The United States supports the brave people of Iran.”

The Persian-language account of the U.S. Department of State on X also reacted to images published of security forces storming Imam Khomeini Hospital in the city of Ilam, calling it a “clear crime against humanity.” The post stated: “Hospitals are not battlefields... This regime shows complete disregard for human life.”

The spokesperson for the European Union’s External Action Service, in a statement, expressed concern over violence against Iranian protesters and called on security forces in Iran to exercise restraint in dealing with participants in peaceful demonstrations. In its statement, the EU described the protests as “reflecting the demands of many Iranians” and emphasized that it is closely monitoring the current situation and developments across Iran. The statement further noted: “We are concerned by the reported deaths and injuries and urge Iran’s security forces to exercise maximum restraint in handling peaceful protests. Socio-economic challenges were acknowledged by authorities and should be addressed through inclusive dialogue, not through violence.”

In Europe, the President of the European Parliament and a number of its members, in supportive messages, emphasized solidarity with the protesters and the need to prevent repression. Some European officials also assessed the internet shutdown as a measure aimed at concealing violence.

In a statement, a delegation of the European Parliament called on the Iranian government to halt violence against protesters, the use of live ammunition, and mass arrests. The statement also stressed the necessity of accountability for human rights violations.

The leaders of France, Germany, and the United Kingdom, in a joint statement, condemned the killing of protesters and called for restraint, respect for freedom of expression, and the right to assembly.

Nikki Haley, a Republican politician and former governor of South Carolina, wrote on her account on the social media platform X that “The Iranian people have suffered tremendously under a corrupt and extremist regime for nearly fifty years. Their voices and their courage are powerful.”

Lindsey Graham, a Republican senator, stated in response to the protests, addressing Iran’s Supreme Leader, that if the Islamic Republic continues suppressing protesters, “Donald J. Trump is going to kill you.”

In his continued reactions, he emphasized that “the day of your freedom is near.” He added that Trump prefers the Iranian people to the Ayatollah and views the protesters’ victory as the path to “making Iran great again.” He further claimed that “If this regime falls, ... the largest state sponsor of terrorism will fall, Hamas, Hezbollah, and the good people of Iran will be in charge.” Norbert Röttgen, a member of the German Parliament, wrote on his account on X that the issue facing the people of Iran is a choice between freedom and terror. He emphasized that the Islamic Republic is once again displaying terror and intimidation in the most brutal form of violence against its own people, with even children not spared.

Hannah Neumann, a German politician and member of the European Union, wrote on her X account in response to the protests in Iran: “Today people across Iran are again taking to the streets. They know they might be met with bullets. But for many silence has become more dangerous than courage. We here have a duty to shed light on what is happening in Iran. This regime has lost every last inch of legitimacy.”

Johann Wadephul, Germany’s Foreign Minister, wrote in response to the protests on X: “People in Iran have been taking to the streets for days. They have the right to express their opinions peacefully! I condemn the excessive use of force against peaceful protesters and call on the Iranian authorities to comply with international obligations.”

Julia Klöckner, President of the German Parliament, said in reaction to the protests that “the protesters in Iran deserve support, they are fighting for their fundamental rights. Instead, the Iranian leadership is restricting the internet, and women and men who go out for their freedom are being shot.”

Mark Carney, Prime Minister of Canada, on the social media platform X, strongly condemned the use of violence, arbitrary arrests, and intimidation tactics by the Iranian regime against its own people. Mr.

Carney wrote: “We stand in solidarity with the Iranian people, whose voice must be heard, as they demand freedom and dignity.”

Canada’s Ministry of Foreign Affairs also reacted to the crackdown on protesters in Iran, stating: “Canada strongly condemns the continued killings of protesters in Iran. The Iranian government must end its horrific repression and intimidation and respect the rights of its citizens.”

Ursula von der Leyen, President of the European Commission, wrote in a message on X on January 10, in response to the nationwide protests in Iran: “Tehran’s streets, and cities around the world, echo with the footsteps of Iranian women and men demanding freedom. Freedom to speak, to gather, to travel and above all to live freely. Europe stands fully behind them.” Three days later, she also wrote on X: “The rising number of casualties in Iran is horrifying. I unequivocally condemn the excessive use of force and continued restriction of freedom.”

Friedrich Merz, the Chancellor of Germany, in a message on X expressed deep concern over reports of violence by security forces in Iran and condemned the killing of protesters. He stated that, together with Emmanuel Macron, President of France, and Keir Starmer, Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, he had called on the Iranian authorities to refrain from using violence and to respect the fundamental rights of the people of Iran.

He also described the Islamic Republic’s resort to violence to remain in power as a sign that the regime’s “time is up,” stating: “If a regime can only maintain power through violence, then it is effectively finished. I believe that we are currently witnessing the final days and weeks of this regime.”

Yvette Cooper, the United Kingdom’s Foreign Secretary, wrote in response to the protests on X: “Alongside our international partners, we have condemned the killing of Iranian protestors and urged the Iranian authorities to respect the fundamental rights of their people to take part in peaceful protests, without fear of violence or reprisals.”

Matteo Renzi, former Prime Minister of Italy, also reacted to the protests in a message on X, writing: “Unfortunately, Iran does not make headlines like Gaza or Venezuela, but right now there are brave and extraordinary young people, not only in Tehran but also in other cities, who are making history.” Andrii Sybiha, Ukraine’s Minister of Foreign Affairs, expressed support for the Iranian protestors, stating: “We call on the international community to consider tightening pressure on the Iranian regime for its violence against its people and support for Russia’s war against Ukraine.”

A number of U.S. officials and lawmakers also expressed support for the protesting people of Iran and warned against any violence toward demonstrators:

Jason Crow, a Democratic member of the U.S. House of Representatives from Kentucky, voiced support for Iranians who are risking “risking their lives for a better future” and condemned the Islamic Republic regime’s violence and intimidation.

Ted Cruz, the Republican senator from Texas, wrote in a post on X in response to the nationwide protests in Iran that if the people of Iran overthrow the “Ayatollah,” the United States and “the entire world” would be safer.

Jacky Rosen, a Democratic senator from Nevada, also described Iran’s ruling regime as “the world’s No. 1 supporter of terrorism.” and emphasized that “a democratic, terror-free Iran would bolster not only regional stability but stability around the world.” Expressing support for protesters seeking freedom from the grip of this repressive regime, she called on the White House to resume its efforts to support activists and to restore the Iranian people’s access to the internet at this critical moment.

Susie Lee, another Democratic member of the U.S. House of Representatives from Nevada, praised the “Millions of people across Iran are showing extraordinary courage as they stand up to the brutal and oppressive Iranian regime.” She stated: “The Iranian regime commits crimes against its own people to maintain power. It does not want the world to know what is happening in their country: the people of Iran are demanding freedom and an end to the Islamic Republic. The world is watching.”

Suhas Subramanyam, a Democratic member of the U.S. House of Representatives from Virginia, also issued a statement emphasizing that the people of Iran have faced years of human rights violations and economic hardship. He expressed his support for the Iranian people and their aspirations for a freer and more secular future.

Lizzie Fletcher, a Democratic member of the U.S. House of Representatives from Texas, supported the Iranian people’s right to peacefully protest in pursuit of a democratic government that would bring them democracy, rights, and opportunity. Referring to the internet shutdown, she stated: “Cutting off Iranians from one another and from the outside world is a disgraceful act by a government that fears its own people.”

The foreign ministers of Australia, Canada, and the European Union, in a joint statement, condemned the violent treatment of protesters by Iranian government forces and called for an immediate halt to the excessive use of force against peaceful gatherings.

Anthony Albanese, Prime Minister of Australia, stated that his country stands with the people of Iran “in fighting against what is an oppressive regime.” He added that the Iranian regime suppresses its own people and expressed support for a democratic Iran that respects human rights.

Penny Wong, Australia’s Foreign Minister, also said at a press conference in Parliament House in Canberra: “Australia stands for the brave people of Iran in their struggle against an oppressive regime. What we have seen over recent days and weeks is an oppressive regime becoming ever more violent and ever more brutal against its own people in an attempt to retain power.” She urged Australian citizens present in Iran to leave the country and, addressing Iran’s regime, stated: “The world is calling on you to stop the brutal repression of your people. That is what President Trump has articulated. It is what the G7 has articulated and what Australia also calls for.”

In another message, she reiterated that the Islamic Republic regime is becoming more violent in its efforts to retain power and emphasized that Australia stands alongside the people of Iran. She also referred to Australia’s measures, including the imposition of sanctions and the expulsion of Iran’s ambassador, and called for an end to the violent crackdown.

Michael Martin, Prime Minister of Ireland, in response to the protests in Iran, condemned the brutal and violent repression of demonstrators. He stated that peaceful protest and freedom of expression are fundamental rights of the Iranian people. He called on the Iranian authorities to end the crackdown, adding: “The violence must stop, the curtailing of basic freedoms must end, and dialogue begin at once.”

David van Weel, the Netherlands’ Foreign Minister, wrote in a message on X: “I am Shocked and appalled by the images and stories coming out of Iran. I strongly condemn the use of violence against peaceful protesters.”

Maria Malmer Stenergard, Sweden’s Minister for Foreign Affairs, responded to the protests by publishing a video message stating that her country is working to have the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps designated as a terrorist organization and stands alongside the people of Iran. Malmer emphasized that Stockholm supports the thousands of brave Iranian women and men protesting for freedom and their rights and condemned the Islamic Republic’s use of deadly violence against peaceful protesters, as well as mass and arbitrary arrests. Despite internet shutdowns in Iran and difficulties in accessing information, she described existing reports of the crackdown as “absolutely horrific” and stated that Sweden is closely and with concern following developments in Iran.

Steve Cohen and Tom McClintock, co-chairs of the Congressional Iran Human Rights and Democracy Caucus in the United States Congress, expressed support for the protests in Iran in a statement published on Monday, January 12. The statement read: “We stand in solidarity with the people of Iran, who have risen with courage to demand their fundamental rights and a future based on freedom, dignity, and democratic governance.”

António Guterres, the United Nations Secretary-General, wrote in a message on X that he was shocked by reports of the level of violence and the excessive use of force by Iranian authorities against protesters, which in recent days has resulted in a number of deaths and injuries. Mr. Guterres emphasized that the rights to freedom of expression, association, and peaceful assembly must be fully respected and guaranteed.

Friedrich Merz, the German Chancellor, in response to the protests in Iran, described the violence by security forces against demonstrators as “disproportionate” and “brutal,” condemning it. Emphasizing the responsibility of Iran’s leadership, he stated: “I call on Iran’s leaders to protect their people, not threaten them.” He further declared that Germany strongly condemns the violence carried out by the Islamic Republic against its own people, adding: “This behavior is not a sign of strength, but of weakness, and it must end.”

Hannah Neumann, a German member of the European Parliament, called for the expulsion of ambassadors and representatives of the Islamic Republic from the European Union. In a post on her

X account, she wrote: “There can be no diplomatic normalization with a regime that answers peaceful protests with bullets to the head and cuts off all communication for its people.”

The European Parliament announced a ban on the entry of diplomats and other representatives of the Islamic Republic of Iran into its buildings. Roberta Metsola, President of the European Parliament, stated that the decision was taken in response to the violent suppression of anti-government protests in Iran. She emphasized that the European Parliament “will not help legitimize a regime that has built its survival on torture, repression, and killing.”

On January 22, 2026, she declared that the voice of the Iranian people’s protests had been heard from the streets of Tehran to the heart of the European Parliament. Metsola stated: “We are appalled by the deadly force the Iranian regime has used against brave Iranians in the streets. These actions must stop. At the level of the European Union, we must intensify our measures, and that is why we are calling for tougher sanctions and ultimately for the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps to be placed on the list of terrorist organizations.”

Robert Jenrick, a Conservative Member of the British Parliament, in response to the protests in Iran, called on the UK government to designate the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps as a “terrorist organization.” In a post on X, he wrote that while such a measure might not have a direct impact on developments inside Iran at this stage, the organization should not be allowed “any refuge or safe haven in Britain.”

The UK Trade Secretary also stated that Britain is willing to amend its laws to enable the designation of the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps as a terrorist organization. He said the British government is reviewing its counterterrorism legislation to achieve this objective. Referring to existing legal limitations, Peter Kyle acknowledged that under current UK law, designating a military institution of Iran as a terrorist organization is not considered “appropriate.” Nevertheless, he emphasized that the United Kingdom will continue to support Iranian citizens facing what he described as “brutal repression.”

The United Kingdom’s Foreign Secretary, in a phone call with his Iranian counterpart, Abbas Araghchi, called for an end to the violent suppression of protesters in Iran. Yvette Cooper wrote that the killing and brutal repression of peaceful protesters in Iran is appalling.

Emmanuel Macron, President of France, also condemned state violence against Iranian protesters in a message posted on X. “The targeting of women and men who are courageously demanding respect for their rights is unacceptable,” he said, emphasizing that respect for fundamental freedoms is a universal demand. Macron further stated that France stands alongside all those who defend these freedoms.

Jean-Noël Barrot, France’s Foreign Minister, described the crackdown on protesters as “the most violent repression in Iran’s modern history” and stated that “it must stop immediately.” Mao Ning, spokesperson for China’s Ministry of Foreign Affairs, opposed “foreign interference” in Iran’s internal affairs and said she hopes that “the Iranian government and people can properly handle their differences and maintain national stability.”

Alain Berset, Secretary General of the Council of Europe, warned that the deadly suppression of nationwide protests in Iran and the regime's internet shutdowns have endangered regional and global stability. He called for adherence to international law and the principles of the United Nations Charter. He stated: "I've convened a meeting with Ambassadors of neighbouring Council of Europe member states to explore steps to defend rights and avert escalation."

The Prime Minister of the United Kingdom strongly condemned the repression and killing of protesters in Iran. Speaking in Parliament on January 14, Keir Starmer said that "the contrast between the courage of the Iranian people and the brutality of their desperate regime has never been clearer." Stating that "we have called out this brutality face-to-face," he added that "we are working with allies on further sanctions and doing all we can to protect UK nationals."

The foreign ministers of the G7 countries announced on January 15, that if Iran continues its crackdown on protesters, they are prepared to impose further restrictive measures against Tehran. The statement, released by France, expressed the countries' deep concern over the killing and injury of a large number of protesters and the "deliberate" use of violence by security forces.

Twelve members of the Swedish Parliament, in a jointly signed official statement, declared their support for the nationwide uprising of the Iranian people against the Islamic Republic, describing the protests as part of a long-standing struggle for freedom, national sovereignty, and the right to self-determination.

A senior member of the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Jeanne Shaheen, voiced support for the Iranian people's protests against the Islamic Republic, stating: "Congress and the American people stand with the resilient people of Iran in their aspiration for a free and prosperous future. ... The future of Iran should be decided by the Iranian people."

New Zealand's Minister of Foreign Affairs expressed outrage over the "escalation of violence and repression in Iran." Winston Peters described the crackdown on Iranian protesters as "brutal." He emphasized: "Iranians have the right to peaceful protest, freedom of expression, and access to information - rights that were being severely suppressed."

Mike Johnson, Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives, stated that the indiscriminate killing of innocent citizens and protesters in Iran is abhorrent and must stop. He called on all world leaders to condemn the killing of Iranians by the Islamic Republic.

Nigel Farage, leader of the Reform UK party, expressed support for the Iranian people's protests against the Islamic Republic in a post on X, writing: "I wish the forces of freedom in Iran well, as I have done for years. This evil regime must go."

Masud Gharahkhani, President of the Norwegian Parliament, stated: "Fighting a dictatorship, the real power is always in the hand of the people."

The World Economic Forum announced that it had withdrawn its invitation to the Islamic Republic's Foreign Minister to attend the Davos summit due to the killing of thousands of protesters in Iran.

Priti Patel, a Member of the British Parliament and Shadow Foreign Secretary, stated in a speech before Parliament that the widespread killing of protesters in Iran constitutes “an affront to humanity” and called for those responsible to be held accountable.

Recep Tayyip Erdoğan, President of Turkey, in his first official response to the protests in Iran, described the developments as “a new test” for Tehran. Referring to Iran’s internal situation, he expressed hope that the country’s authorities would be able to navigate this period through an approach based on dialogue and diplomacy.

At a session of the European Parliament, at the initiative of its President, members applauded for one minute in honor of the “courage and bravery” of the Iranian people and paid tribute to the victims. Instead of observing a moment of silence, European lawmakers stood and applauded the protesting people of Iran for one minute.

In a rare move, the South Korean Parliament adopted a resolution condemning the bloody crackdown on protesters in Iran and calling for a response from the international community.

Joe Wilson, a senior member of the U.S. Congress, condemned what he described as the massacre of tens of thousands of brave Iranians in the streets and hospitals, calling the Islamic Republic regime a “deranged terrorist regime.”

Sam Van Rooy, a member of the Belgian Parliament, wrote on X: “There are already far too many IRGC agents and supporters of the Islamic regime on our territory. They must be identified and expelled from the country along with their families. Khamenei and the Revolutionary Guard are a group of extremist Islamists who have occupied Iran and are systematically repressing and massacring the brave people of that country.”

The U.S. Department of State reacted on X to the death sentence issued against Amirhossein Ghaderzadeh, a protester arrested during Iran’s nationwide demonstrations, stating that the ruling shows “how far the Iranian government is willing to go to silence the voice of the Iranian people.”

The official Persian-language account of the U.S. Department of State wrote: “The internet shutdown by the Islamic Republic isn’t only about silencing Iranians - it’s also about keeping them in poverty. Every day the internet is cut off costs Iran more than $37 million, paralyzes businesses, and pushes families into deeper hardship. The Islamic Republic deprives people of opportunities, while its own officials stay online to spread lies and cling to power.”

Several members of the European Parliament, including Hannah Neumann of Germany, spoke about Europe’s response to the crackdown on protests and the internet shutdown in Iran. Referring to the risks Iranian protesters face every day, Neumann called on the European Union to designate the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps as a terrorist organization. She identified Spain, Italy, and France as obstacles to such a decision and emphasized the full enforcement of sanctions and the expulsion of Iranian diplomats accused of intimidation.

Steve Witkoff, Donald Trump’s Special Envoy for the Middle East, said on January 21, that a large and “horrific” massacre had occurred during the protests in Iran and called for a change in the Iranian government’s behavior. Speaking on the sidelines of the Davos summit in Switzerland, he stated: “Iran must change its behavior. If they do so and show a willingness to do so, then we can resolve the issue through diplomatic means.”

The European Parliament adopted a strong resolution condemning the violent suppression of nationwide protests in Iran and calling on the Council of the European Union to fully designate the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps, the Basij Force, and the Quds Force as terrorist organizations. The resolution expressed full solidarity with the protesters, condemned the deliberate and disproportionate use of force, the widespread killing of citizens, executions, and mass arrests, and emphasized the necessity of holding the Iranian government accountable for these crimes.

Luigi Marattin, Secretary-General of Italy’s Liberal Democratic Party, wrote on X in support of the Iranian protests that the Iranian government is repressing young people who are demanding freedom and democracy. He also questioned whether Western intervention to defend human rights constitutes a violation of international law or a necessity for the future of the region.

António Costa, President of the European Council, wrote on his X account that the Iranian government must stop the violent repression of its people, stating that the European Council stands with Iranians who are demanding rights, dignity, and freedom.

The German Confederation of Trade Unions, in a statement expressing unconditional solidarity with the people of Iran, wrote: “for weeks hundreds of thousands across Iran have been courageously protesting against repression, political oppression, and lack of social prospects.” According to the organization, Iranians’ efforts are aimed at challenging systematic human rights violations, authoritarian rule, and governmental failures that have driven large segments of the population into poverty and insecurity. The regime’s brutal violence against peaceful protesters, along with arbitrary arrests and killings, clearly demonstrates that the political leadership has lost its legitimacy. Workers, trade union members, and committed representatives of civil society, whose fundamental rights are systematically violated, are particularly vulnerable.

The European Parliament adopted a resolution condemning widespread human rights violations by the Islamic Republic in Iran, including “systematic repression, inhumane conditions, and arbitrary detentions.” The resolution, passed on February 12, condemned the Islamic Republic’s conduct toward the Iranian people, particularly civil activists, protesters, women, and minorities, and warned that the scale of the recent violence could amount to “crimes against humanity.”

International Figures

Pope Leo, leader of the world’s Catholics, stated: “My thoughts are with the current situation in the Middle East, especially in Iran and Syria.”

A group of 800 filmmakers and cultural figures from various countries, including prominent names such as Juliette Binoche and Marion Cotillard, French actresses; Yorgos Lanthimos, the Greek director; and Florian Zeller, the French writer and filmmaker, issued a statement condemning the Islamic Republic’s “killing and torture” of the Iranian people during the recent protests. The statement reads: “In response to the widespread and peaceful protests of the Iranian people against repression, poverty, discrimination, and structural injustice, the Islamic Republic has chosen, instead of listening to the voice of the people, to respond with live ammunition, mass killings, widespread arrests, torture, enforced disappearances, and a nationwide shutdown of the internet.”

J.K. Rowling, author of the Harry Potter series, wrote regarding the protests in Iran: “The courage of these people is astonishing. They have shone like a light in these dark times.” In a post on X, she added: “If you claim to support human rights yet can’t bring yourself to show solidarity with those fighting for their liberty in Iran, you’ve revealed yourself. You don’t give a damn about people being oppressed and brutalized so long as it’s being done by the enemies of your enemies.” Richard Branson, the British entrepreneur, called for global attention to the “wave of popular protests in recent days across Iran.” In a post on X, he wrote that “hundreds of thousands of Iranians taking to the streets out of despair over the economic situation, rising inflation, and cost of living.”

Carlos Queiroz, the former Portuguese head coach of Iran’s national football team, reacted to the internet shutdown in Iran in an Instagram post: “I am deeply concerned about the safety and well-being of the people of Iran, particularly amid the disruption of internet communications. ... Freedom is breathing air free of lies.”

Penélope Cruz, the renowned Spanish actress, showed her support for the protests in Iran by reposting a UNICEF statement about the country. The statement expressed deep concern over the number of children and adolescents killed or injured during the protests and emphasized that authorities, those involved, and families must take all necessary measures to protect children, and that security forces must refrain from using unnecessary force.

Javier Bardem, the prominent Spanish actor, also expressed solidarity with the people of Iran by sharing an image from the nationwide protests.

Philippine Leroy, the French actress, expressed her support and solidarity with the people of Iran over several consecutive days through her Instagram stories. Sharing an image of Iranian protesters gathered in demonstration, she wrote: “this is not about picking sides or politics, but about defending human dignity, freedom, and human rights.”

Juliette Binoche, the renowned French actress and Academy Award winner, posted an image of the protests in Tehran on Instagram and wrote: “In solidarity with Iranian people; you are Incredibly brave.”

Paolo Maldini, former captain of the Italian national football team and AC Milan, reacted to the widespread presence of people in the streets of Iran by reposting an Instagram post and writing: “All eyes on Iran.”

Ebru Gündeş, the well-known Turkish pop singer and actress, considered one of the most influential stars in her country's entertainment industry, also addressed Iranians in a message, writing: "Our prayers and hearts are with you." She concluded her message with the hashtag Iran.

Aynur Doğan, the Kurdish singer and musician born in Turkey, known for blending traditional Kurdish music with contemporary styles and for introducing Kurdish musical heritage to global audiences, also responded to the events. In an Instagram post, she wrote: "The stronger the longing for freedom and justice grows... May your hands be kept away from Iran, Rojhelat, Syria, and Rojava..." She concluded her message with the hashtag Iran.

Elif Shafak, one of Turkey's most prominent contemporary writers, known for her novels addressing culture, human rights, and the role of women, also reacted to the protests in Iran in an Instagram post: "Iran... As I write this, the number of victims after days of consecutive protests is estimated in the hundreds, and the internet has been cut off across the country. My heart is with the brave women of Iran, the sisters of Mahsa Amini, with the extraordinary young people of Iran, and with the writers, poets, artists, and artisans of this remarkable land, rich in art, creativity, and culture, yet, tragically, systematically overlooked in the cycle of international news coverage."

Amal Mathlouthi, the Tunisian singer and songwriter known as the "voice of the Arab Spring," also reacted to the events. In an Instagram post, she wrote: "Some of you don't know the extent of my love and fascination for Iran... it was love at first sight for me after watching countless films by Kiarostami and Panahi."

Mark Ruffalo, the American actor and filmmaker known for his versatile performances and for portraying the character "Hulk," shared an Amnesty International post on his Instagram story and wrote: "Iranian authorities must ... refrain from using unlawful force."

David Schwimmer, the American actor, director, and producer best known for portraying Ross Geller in the television series Friends, shared an image on his Instagram story of a protester in Tehran holding the Lion and Sun flag, accompanied by the hashtag "Erfan Soltani," a protester sentenced to death.

Ms. Rachel, an American educator, YouTuber, and singer-songwriter known for creating a popular children's music series, also reshared a UNICEF post on Instagram, writing: "Stop violence against all people. Always protect children. My heart is with you." The reshared image stated: "We are extremely concerned by continuing reports of children and adolescents being killed and injured amid the ongoing public unrest in Iran."

Yungblud, the well-known English punk and rock musician, also responded explicitly to the events. During a concert, he stated: "What is going on in Iran is beautiful, because this revolution is led by the women. And for four days, they have had their internet cut off, they have had their electricity cut off, they are in darkness. They are asking for our voice... Speak, shout, post, because they are fighting for freedom, they are fighting for their freedom, they are fighting for our freedom. Because nobody is free until we are all free."

The rock band Garbage, known for blending alternative rock with electronic music and for selling over 17 million albums worldwide, wrote on Instagram: “What the people of Iran are doing right now is extraordinary. Unarmed, cut off from the world, and still standing. This is courage. This is history.”

Alecia Beth Moore, known professionally as Pink, the acclaimed American singer and multiple Grammy Award winner, reshared a video of people marching in Tehran and wrote from their perspective: “We are here, in the heart of darkness, without internet, without communications.”

Chris de Burgh, the Irish singer-songwriter who has many fans in Iran and is known for songs such as “The Lady in Red,” wrote on his Facebook page: “These are extraordinary, thrilling but dangerous times for Iranians as so many are risking their lives in Iran by protesting against the repressive and hateful regime that still governs their country.”

Schiller, the German electronic musician whose real name is Christopher von Deylen and who has previously held concerts in Iran, wrote in a message published in both Persian and English: “I miss you like crazy and your energy means the world to me. I cannot wait to... feel you... again. May real freedom prevail.”

Madonna, the American singer-songwriter known as the “Queen of Pop,” who is renowned for her influence on music, fashion, and social issues and is considered the best-selling female music artist of all time, wrote in a video posted on Instagram:

“We take so much for granted. Myself included — the freedom to travel the world, to wear what I want, to ride a horse across the desert, to speak freely and not be silenced by punishment, torture, and possibly death, to sing, to dance, to choose my own spiritual path and not someone else’s... The women of Iran do not have this freedom. I stand with them. The people of Iran have not known freedom for centuries... my thoughts and prayers are with the people of Iran...”

Bernard-Henri Lévy, the French writer and intellectual, in a note published in the weekly Le Point, referring to the widespread scale of the crackdown on protests in Iran and estimates indicating that thousands have been killed, described the inaction and evasiveness of Western governments regarding the crimes committed as “shameful.” He warned that ignoring this massacre would mark a moral and historical failure in the face of one of the greatest contemporary tragedies in the world.

Non-Governmental Iranian Political Figures

Mostafa Tajzadeh, a jailed political activist, wrote in a letter from Evin Prison that the current situation is the result of the ruling establishment’s misguided policies and that the present path will lead to a dead end. He emphasized that the Supreme Leader of the Islamic Republic plays the greatest role in governing the country and wrote:

“The root cause of the economic, social, political, international, and even environmental problems is not this or that government or parliament, but rather the obstructionist structure of the absolute guardianship of the jurist and Mr. Khamenei’s Iran-destroying and people-impoverishing policies.”

Shirin Ahmadnia, a sociologist, reacting to the protests, stated: “In these days, as we witness protests and widespread social tension across the country, we must not forget that this society has been breathing under simultaneous economic, cultural, generational, and institutional pressures for years. Today, these pressures have once again manifested themselves in the language of protest—protests emerging from the long-term accumulation of repeated disappointments and unfulfilled promises. Today’s protests in Iran cannot be reduced merely to a single class, a single generation, or a specific demand. We are witnessing a kind of emotional rupture between society and decision-making institutions.”

Zahra Rahnavard, one of the leaders of the protests during the 2009 presidential election, known as the “Green Movement”, offered condolences for the killing of protesters in recent days in a post on Instagram. Sharing an image of one of her paintings, she wrote: “Condolences for the withering of the nation’s youth; do not be afraid, do not be afraid! We are all together. Yes, together we will move from despotism toward democracy.”

Varisheh Moradi, a political prisoner held in Evin Prison, responded to the protests in a written letter. Part of the letter reads:

“Neither religious despotism nor monarchy; Woman, Life, Freedom. These words are written from behind prison walls and beside cells whose voices have long been accompanied by execution and repression. Power believes it can imprison bodies, silence voices, and crush the will of the people, but history has repeatedly shown that no wall, no bars, and no gallows rope has ever been able to extinguish the fire of resistance. The ongoing protests in various cities of Iran, especially in Ilam and Kermanshah, are the direct product of a systemic inefficiency that has taken the lives and dignity of the people hostage through cannons, guns, prisons, and executions. The killing of people in Malekshahi is a stark sign of the cruelty and desperation of this system; clear evidence that repression and bloodshed generate neither legitimacy nor stability, but rather reproduce resistance and collective will.”

Molavi Abdolhamid Ismaeilzahi, the Friday Prayer Imam of Zahedan, reacted in a message posted on the social media platform X to orders reportedly issued by the Supreme Leader of the Islamic Republic and the head of the judiciary to suppress protesters across the country. In his message, Molavi Abdolhamid wrote: “Offering condolences to the families of the recent victims, it must be emphasized that any lethal violence against protesters is considered a crime under international law and is also religiously forbidden and unjustifiable.”

This Sunni cleric also described the protests as “a national uprising for major change.” While emphasizing the right to peaceful protest, he urged demonstrators to refrain from destruction and violence. At the same time, he called on security forces to stand with the people and to avoid repression.

A few days later, Abdolhamid Ismaeilzahi described the killing of a large number of citizens during the nationwide protests as “a horrific and unprecedented tragedy.” He stated that “the killing of protesters in recent days has caused widespread sorrow and anger within society and has wounded the conscience of free people around the world.” Stressing the responsibility of those who ordered and carried out these actions, he called for accountability.

Shirin Ebadi, Nobel Peace Prize laureate, along with six others, addressed a letter to Donald Trump urging him to fulfill his “promise” to help the people of Iran. Referring to the killings that took place during the internet shutdown of November 2019, they wrote:

“Now that, unfortunately, all avenues for curbing the repression and saving the lives of our compatriots have reached a dead end, exiting this situation requires international assistance.”

The letter was signed by Mohammad Javad Akbarin, religious scholar and journalist; Nazanin Ansari, managing director of Kayhan London and journalist; Foad Pashaei, Secretary-General of the Constitutionalist Party of Iran; Yazdan Shohadaie, spokesperson for the Transitional Council; Shirin Ebadi, jurist and Nobel Peace Prize laureate; Mohsen Makhmalbaf, writer and filmmaker; and Abdullah Mohtadi, Secretary-General of the Komala Party of Iranian Kurdistan.

On January 2, 2026, 17 civil and political activists issued a joint statement expressing support for the nationwide protests in Iran and describing a peaceful transition from the Islamic Republic as “an irrepressible necessity.” The signatories, including Abolfazl Ghadiani, Jafar Panahi, Mostafa Tajzadeh, Narges Mohammadi, and Mostafa Malekian, referred to the continuation of street protests as a “major movement of civil resistance by the people of Iran” and a reflection of the national will to remove the ruling system. They emphasized demands such as freedom, justice, human dignity, and the right to self-determination.

The statement also called on law enforcement and security forces to adhere to their responsibility to protect citizens’ lives and to refrain from suppressing protesters or using violence against the people.

On January 14, 2026, approximately 450 Iranian feminists declared in a separate statement that the disruption of the internet, mobile phone services, and communication channels is not a “technical failure,” but rather part of a mechanism of repression and concealment of state violence. The signatories represent diverse groups of feminist activists, academics, journalists, lawyers, and artists.

Elaheh Mohammadi, a journalist for the banned newspaper Ham-Mihan, wrote: “For the past day or two, our VPNs have worked sporadically, about half an hour to an hour per day, and we manage to connect to the internet. We send word that we are alive. The city smells of death. In all my life, I have never seen it snow in Tehran without anyone even smiling.”

Approximately 1,900 activists stated in a declaration that the Islamic Republic of Iran’s killing machine has still not stopped. They wrote: “Thousands of detainees are currently subjected to torture, forced confessions, fabricated cases, the issuance of heavy sentences, and the risk of execution.” Referring to the nationwide internet shutdown and the impossibility of accessing independent information, statistics, and reports, the signatories added: “Out of the public eye, bloody repression in official and unofficial prisons and detention centers continues in its most severe forms.” They further emphasized: “The experience of the mass killings of the 1980s and systematic torture has turned this warning into an undeniable reality.”

Iranian Political and Civil Groups and Unions

The Iran Reform Front reacted to the protests, stating that the government’s approach of avoiding violence and listening to the voices of protesters is a positive, though insufficient, step toward rebuilding public trust. It added that the protests of the Iranian people have entirely domestic roots and can only be pursued through peaceful means.

The Workers’ House of Iran (Khaneh Kargar) also issued a statement in response to the protests, declaring that it is the undeniable legal and social right of the Iranian people to protest their living and economic conditions. It noted that the country’s workers have repeatedly raised their demands in a professional and peaceful manner.

The Kermanshah Bar Association, in a statement responding to the public protests, described the purpose of government and political, administrative, and military institutions as “securing the interests of the people” in areas such as the economy, security, healthcare, and education. It emphasized that despite more than four decades since the revolution, the Islamic Republic has failed to achieve a significant portion of these goals. The statement added that over these years, Iran has become a “poor and isolated” country, and that the “widespread poverty and misery of the people,” alongside the “expansion of corruption,” are clear signs of the inefficiency of the governing system.

The Harsin Teachers’ Association, in a statement expressing support for the protests, declared that under the current circumstances, no option remains except street demonstrations.

A number of labor unions, retirees’ groups, and social organizations also responded to the public protests in a joint statement, declaring that runaway inflation has broken the backs of the majority of the population. Wages and salaries that fall below the poverty line and basic living standards, privatization policies, repression, imprisonment, executions, and warmongering policies have pushed people’s lives to the brink of collapse. Society has reached a boiling point, and the nationwide protests are a direct reflection of this critical situation.

The Islamabad-e Gharb Teachers’ Association, expressing its support for the protests, stated: “Given the livelihood problems of employed and retired teachers, as well as various segments of society in these disordered economic conditions, we declare our full support for the rightful protests of different groups across the country and will stand alongside them.”

The Iranian Writers Association, in a statement, supported the people’s “unconditional right to protest” and called on all freedom-seeking writers, artists, and like-minded institutions around the world to “be the strong voice of support for the people of Iran and not allow the government to once again fill prisons and cemeteries with protesters.”

The statement noted that the Islamic Republic has built its foundation upon “the killing, torture, and imprisonment of opponents, critics, and freedom-seekers,” and warned that the government has consistently responded to street protests with a “uniform pattern,” through “direct gunfire at protesters and the fabrication of cases against detainees.”

The Khorasan Bar Association, reacting to the recent protests, emphasized the observance of citizens' rights and human dignity and announced its readiness to play an advisory role in legal dialogue. The statement stressed that peaceful protest against economic conditions is legitimate and must be distinguished from violent or destructive acts that exploit such demonstrations.

A number of teachers across the country also issued a statement declaring that Iranian society is facing a comprehensive and structural crisis that goes beyond livelihood issues. In part of the statement, signed by 555 teachers, it reads: "Economic and livelihood pressures are among the main drivers of popular protests, but the country's problems over the past four decades, under 14 administrations and 12 parliaments, not only have not been resolved but have grown deeper and more widespread each day. The roots of the crises lie in the political structure of the Islamic Republic, and without a fundamental change in this structure, improving the living conditions of the people will not be possible."

Iran's Visual Arts Associations issued a joint statement in response to the protests of recent days. Part of the statement reads: "What we hear is the cry of protest from a people who, under the pressure of years of injustice and political and economic inefficiency, have become hopeless and disillusioned with any reform of the current situation."

The statement was released by the associations of painters, graphic designers, photographers, sculptors, and the Potters' Association.

The Kerman Bar Association, in a statement, emphasized the necessity of initiating a swift, transparent, and candid dialogue with the protesters. According to the statement, the association believes that the current disordered livelihood and economic conditions of society are influenced, on the one hand, by the unjust sanctions imposed by hostile governments, and on the other hand, by weaknesses and deficiencies in governance, particularly in the economic sphere.

The Nurabad Mamasani Teachers' Trade Association, expressing support for the protests, declared that protesting the inefficiency of the Islamic Republic and voicing demands, shortages, shortcomings, and criticism of existing conditions are the right of the Iranian people. It strongly condemned any confrontation with this legal right of the people. The association called for the unconditional release of all detainees arrested during the recent protests and stated that the continued detention of citizens is contrary to the law, social rationality, and human dignity.

The National Front of Iran stated: "We support the legal and civil right of protest of the great nation of Iran, merchants, students, women, teachers, workers, retirees, and other segments of society, and we consider the disastrous and violent crackdown with protesters and the shedding of their blood to be illegal and inhumane, and we strongly condemn it."

The Khorasan branch of the National Front of Iran, in its second statement regarding the protests, also reacted to recent events. Part of the statement reads:

"Amid the continuing wave of the people's justice-seeking protests, in recent days we have witnessed one of the most horrific crimes against our own nation: attacks on hospitals and medical centers, which are sanctuaries for the wounded and symbols of humanity. Such an act is not only a blatant violation of human rights principles and the Constitution, but even in the harshest periods of war between countries, it is recognized as a war crime. We condemn this inhumane and anti-national crime with all our strength and human conscience. An attack on a hospital is a sign of the moral and political collapse of a structure that is no longer committed to the law, to the nation, or to human conscience. We explicitly declare that in the face of this clear oppression, silence is not permissible. We call on all segments of the Iranian nation, workers, students, teachers, doctors, artists, merchants, and every awakened conscience, to join the ranks of civil protests in defense of human dignity and to bring an end to despotic rule.”

Among academic and social figures, statements and notes were published focusing on the crisis of governance, the necessity of dialogue with the people, and the release of detainees. Some civil activists also pointed to the arrest of children, teenagers, and students, calling for an end to security measures against vulnerable groups.

The Association of Families of Flight PS752 Victims, in a statement issued on Friday, January 2, expressed solidarity with protesters in Iran and called for the immediate halt of the violent suppression of protests, accountability regarding those killed, injured, and detained, and respect for the right to protest and freedom of expression.

The association further called on governments to expel ambassadors of the Islamic Republic from their countries. In part of the statement, it urged “the free world” to refer “the case of the Islamic Republic’s organized crimes” to the United Nations Security Council so that immediate decisions could be taken against the Islamic Republic and for the International Criminal Court to initiate its investigations.

The Imam Ali Society, in an open letter to the United Nations, called for the establishment of a fact-finding commission to examine the current human rights situation in Iran and the high number of those killed in the recent protests.

On January 20, a group of medical, paramedical, and forensic specialists published an analytical statement systematically examining publicly available images and videos of individuals injured and killed during the protests. The statement reports the existence of serious and alarming patterns in the violation of fundamental medical, forensic, and therapeutic neutrality principles.

The report refers to evidence indicating that some of the deceased had received medical intervention prior to death. The presence of equipment such as intravenous cannulas, urinary catheters, breathing tubes, and cardiac monitoring devices on bodies found outside medical environments strengthens the possibility that some of the injured died after treatment had begun, or were removed from medical centers without formal confirmation of death.

The statement also points to cases of gunshot victims allegedly being abandoned without treatment, extensive abdominal incisions performed outside recognized forensic protocols, signs of severe physical violence, mutilation, decapitation, and the collective transfer of bodies. Reports were also cited of evidence consistent with exposure to toxic chemical substances and severe thermal destruction of remains, which significantly limits the possibility of conducting independent forensic examinations.

The signatories emphasized that although the report has methodological limitations due to the lack of direct access to bodies and medical records, the findings are consistent with patterns of systematic mistreatment in situations involving mass casualties and serious human rights violations, and could serve as a basis for future independent investigations.

Students at dozens of universities across Iran issued statements boycotting examinations in protest of the killing of thousands of citizens by the Islamic Republic's repressive forces during the protests. The widespread nature of the exam boycott led the Ministry of Health to announce that students of medical sciences faculties who were absent would have their absences considered "justified."

A group of independent journalists inside and outside Iran, in a statement, described the violent crackdown and mass killing of protesters in Iran as a "premeditated crime against humanity," emphasizing that this crime is neither justifiable, nor forgivable, nor forgettable.

Several political prisoners held in Karaj Central Penitentiary, including Mohsen Parish, Mehrdad Bakhtiari, Masoud Farikhteh, Zartosht Ahmadi Raqeb, and Mohammad Hassani, issued a statement condemning the suppression of protesters.

The Syndicate of Workers of the Tehran and Suburbs Bus Company, in a statement, declared: "In solidarity with the outraged people, we demand full transparency regarding the status of all detainees of the protests, access for their families, and the immediate end to repression and violence against workers and protesting citizens. Political prisoners must be released. Those who ordered and carried out these crimes must be tried in fair and public courts."

Iranian Artists and Cultural Figures

A number of well-known figures in the fields of sports and performing arts also expressed their solidarity with protesters through messages or symbolic actions. At the same time, the critical positions taken by some prominent figures were met with reactions and attacks from media outlets close to the ruling establishment.

Reza Kianian, a film actor, wrote in defense of the protesters on his personal page: "A young person with no future, the unemployed, shopkeepers and employees whose income does not match their expenses are protesting." He emphasized that a protester takes to the streets out of necessity, in order to have their voice heard.

Homayoun Shajarian, a traditional Iranian music singer, announced the cancellation of his concerts in a published statement. He wrote that due to the pain and sorrow caused by what the people are going through, and the violence faced by protesters, he is unable to hold concerts at this time.

Alireza Ghorbani, a traditional Iranian music singer, reacted to the protests by posting a message on his Instagram page announcing the postponement of his concert "Iranam" in Tabriz, as well as other upcoming performances in different cities. Referring to "the current conditions of the country and the bitter events and suffering endured by the people of Iran, especially the families who have lost their loved ones,” he stated that continuing to hold concerts at this time is not in harmony with the public mood.

Ali Ghamsari, an Iranian musician and composer, wrote: “For me, what matters is how much unlocking the door of our home to outsiders carries the risk of destroying the country.” In several Instagram stories, he added: “A few direct sentences without the usual poetic ambiguity that is often seen these days: The protests of these days arise from poverty and hardship and are entirely justified. In fact, they stem from concern for the homeland and a sense of responsibility for the lives of our fellow citizens. I am fully aligned and sympathetic with a protest grounded in national will and rooted in patriotism.”

Pantea Bahram, a theater and cinema artist, expressed support for the merchants’ protests by posting an Instagram story, writing: “For three years, I have pulled down the shutters and joined the strikes.”

A group of screenwriters issued a statement in response to the protests. Part of the statement reads: “If the most important task of screenwriting is to portray the realities of life, one cannot remain silent in the face of the hardships that are imposed on people’s lives each day with increasing brutality. The political, cultural, and economic protests of recent days are not a fleeting excitement, but the result of years of not being heard, being ignored, and the systematic silencing of dissenting voices.”

The statement includes the names of individuals such as Maryam Moghaddam, Farhad Towhidi, Behtash Sanaeeha, Peyman Ghasemkhani, and Payam Yazdani.

A number of Iranian filmmakers also issued a statement declaring their support for the nationwide protests and strikes in Iran:

“For nearly half a century, despite the vast natural and human resources in our beloved country Iran, neither justice, nor prosperity, nor security has been achieved. Organized corruption, the plundering of public wealth, and a fear-inducing ideology have driven people’s lives into poverty, suffocation, and despair, while national resources have been destroyed in regional conflicts.”

Sirvan Khosravi, singer and composer, reacted to the protests in Iran by posting an Instagram story in which he said: “We, the people, are the true owners and heirs of this land—the owners of all the resources, wealth, opportunities, and capacities that have been withheld from us. We have the right to protest anything we wish, and even if such protests are deemed unjustified, they should not be answered with injury, arrest, or the loss of life, let alone in circumstances where the protests are entirely justified.”

Ehsan Khajeh Amiri, an Iranian singer, expressed his support for the protests in a post on his Instagram page and honored the memory of those who lost their lives in the path of freedom: “If it were otherwise, I would doubt the whole world. After the shooting down of the Ukrainian plane, after the shooting of defenseless people in the streets, after all the wounds you inflicted on our Iran, I had no doubt left. As we witness these days, may the memory of Kian Pirfalak, Nika Shakarami, Mahsa Amini, Rira Esmaeilion, Navid Afkari, and all those who are no longer among us and never tasted freedom be honored.”

Amirhossein Ghiassi, a well-known Instagram blogger and television host, broke his silence after several days and reacted to the recent protests. Responding to criticism over his silence, he wrote on his personal page: “What does Amirhossein’s support for the protesters even mean when I myself am a protester?”

Bahram Afshari, a cinema and television actor, reacted to the protests in a post. Referring to “hatred, sorrow, and stress,” he spoke of individuals who, in his view, through rent-seeking, corruption, and inefficiency, have shrunk people’s livelihoods and destroyed the dreams of the youth. Afshari also expressed sorrow over the economic conditions of society and the transformation of basic needs into distant dreams, voicing concern for his grieving compatriots. He concluded: “God, protect the youth of my land.”

Parsa Pirouzfard, a prominent Iranian television and cinema actor, expressed solidarity with protesters, stating: “Where is the limit to this humiliation and crushing of people’s bodies and souls? ... If you suffocate the cry of pain, does the pain itself disappear? Will it not emerge tomorrow deeper and more terrifying?”

Toomaj Salehi, protest rapper and former political prisoner, wrote in response to the protests: “Today, as always, and for as long as dictatorship exists, we stand shoulder to shoulder with our compatriots, shouting for freedom and democracy.”

Mohsen Makhmalbaf, the renowned Iranian filmmaker, published a message on social media in solidarity with the protesters. He wrote: “It is our duty, through national solidarity, to ensure that these bitter and sweet days pass with the least possible cost to the lives of the people of Iran. As a citizen, my heart mourns the martyrs of freedom, and my eyes are filled with tears for the hungry people of Iran.”

A total of 184 Iranian filmmakers also issued a joint statement condemning the suppression of protests and described the shooting of unarmed people as a “crime against the right to life.” In addition, the Iranian House of Cinema stated in a separate statement that in the absence of effective channels to protest, “the people have no path but the streets,” and characterized violence against protesters as illegitimate.

Jafar Panahi and Mohammad Rasoulof, two Iranian film directors, declared in a joint statement that following the massive turnout of people in the streets, the Islamic Republic has once again resorted to repression and cut communication channels. Expressing concern over the fate of protesters, they called on the international community and human rights organizations to take immediate action to ensure access to independent information and to monitor the situation in Iran.

Jafar Panahi, at the 91st New York Film Critics Circle Awards, dedicated his Best Director award for the film “A Simple Accident” to the protesters in the streets of Iran. Referring to the recent protests, he stated that in recent days a number of protesters have been killed and many others arrested, joining prisoners who have been behind bars for years.

In a further reaction to the nationwide protests in Iran, he said: “After the violent suppression of the protests by Mr. Khamenei’s government, the leader of Iran will no longer be able to control society. The government itself knows it cannot manage the country and rule over the people. Perhaps their intention is to push Iran to the brink and then destroy it.”

Kayhan Kalhor, the prominent Iranian kamancheh player and musician, wrote on Instagram: “For nearly four decades, my kamancheh has wept over the coffins of my dearest ones. Today, I ask all musicians to join me and be the voice of the people of Iran.”

He also responded to the crackdown on protests by posting an Instagram story: “Iranians, my compatriots, save your tears for the moment of passing through the gates of freedom. Today, we only shout. You Iranians forced into exile have, with these very cries, multiplied the speed of the world’s politicians’ reactions.”

Sohrab Pournazeri, artist and tar player, reacted to the protests by publishing a video message stating: “We Kurds are the heart’s beloved children of Iran; we are pieces of Iran’s body. At critical historical junctures, vast parts of Kurdish-inhabited lands were separated from Iran. Now Iran once again stands at a decisive historical turning point. In honor of their blood, we Kurds join hands to safeguard Iran’s territorial integrity, and we are certain that light will overcome darkness. Long live Iran.”

Googoosh, the renowned Iranian singer, attended a rally in Los Angeles in support of the protesters and called for assistance to demonstrators in Iran.

Behrouz Vossoughi, the veteran Iranian actor, expressed his support for protesters in a video message, saying: “My heart is with you; I stand with you and support you.”

Niki Karimi, Iranian cinema star, wrote on her Instagram account in reaction to the deaths of protesters at the hands of the Islamic Republic: “This is a genocide. The world must respond.”

A group of 87 Iranian artists, writers, and cultural activists, who described themselves as pioneers in the fields of culture and thought, issued a statement expressing deep concern over what they called the “bloody and unprecedented repression of citizens” during the nationwide protests.

Sara Rajaei, an Iranian filmmaker and animator whose short animation “The City of Poets” won the European Film Academy’s Vimeo Short Film Award, said after receiving her prize at the European Film Awards ceremony: “Tonight I am here with a heavy heart, and I dedicate this award and this film to the brave people of Iran, especially those who lost their lives.”

Iranian Athletes

Among Iranian athletes who reacted in various ways to the nationwide protests are the following: Mohammad Khakpour, former captain of Iran’s national football team, responded to Ali Khamenei referring to protesters as “rioters.” Writing on Instagram, he stated: “One cannot expect people who are being crushed under the weight of inflation, unemployment, and insecurity about tomorrow to remain forever silent—and then silence their voices with a simple label of ‘riot.’”

Alireza Haghighi, former goalkeeper of Iran’s national football team, expressed solidarity with the nationwide protests by posting an Instagram story that read: “Protest is not a crime! The crime is not listening to the people’s voice! Iran is alive because its people are still standing.”

Ali Daei, the prominent former Iranian footballer, said in an interview with the news website Tabnak in response to the protests: “I have roots in this soil, and I would not trade the people of my country for anything. How is it possible that in the past year the dollar has increased by one and a half times? How can our officials lay their heads down and sleep peacefully? Perhaps many of them are not truly Iranian, that they do not feel compassion for the Iranian nation.”

Mehdi Mahdavia, former Iranian football star, expressed support for the people’s protests in a post on his Instagram page and called on the authorities to “entrust the fate of the people to the people themselves.” In his message, he wrote that Iran’s wealth is in the hands of a “particular group” that has monopolized it through rent-seeking and embezzlement.

Mahdavia also reacted to the complete internet shutdown by urging the international community to prevent the silencing of the Iranian people’s voice. In an Instagram story, he wrote: “When the internet is shut down, human rights are shut down as well.”

Rahman Ahmadi, former goalkeeper of Iran’s national football team, in solidarity with the nationwide protests, described the attack by the Islamic Republic’s repressive forces on protesters inside a hospital as a war crime.

Adel Ferdosipour, former sports presenter of IRIB and host of the program Navad, stated in response to the protests: “With my head held high and in a loud voice, I say: in these difficult and critical circumstances, as my compatriots endure suffering, anguish, and mourning, I stand beside them. No awakened conscience can remain silent in the face of violence, cruelty, and the killing of fellow citizens.”

Davoud Fanaei, former goalkeeper of Persepolis and Iran’s national football team, wrote on Instagram: “It is not possible that people who until recently were called a proud nation and a source of honor suddenly become foreign agents and instigators of evil the moment they raise their rightful voices of protest. It is not possible not to hear the people’s voice. You cannot expect people to be blind and see nothing, deaf and hear nothing, mute and say nothing.”

Saleh Foroutannik, a member of Iran’s national basketball team, wrote on Instagram: “You hold a pellet gun in your hands and show no mercy to young or old. And you claim to want nuclear energy for peaceful purposes?”

Parviz Boroumand, former goalkeeper of Iran’s national football team, addressed officials by writing: “The voice of the oppressed, honorable, and dignified people of Iran must be heard; these people are not rioters.”

Mohammad Talaei, former wrestler and coach of Iran’s national freestyle wrestling team, wrote in an Instagram story: “Do not appropriate my personal views, I am among the people and of the people.” He had previously responded to Ali Khamenei’s description of protesters as “rioters,” writing: “A cry that rises from poverty is not a riot, it is the voice of those who have been driven to the brink.”

Ahmadreza Abedzadeh, former goalkeeper of Persepolis and Iran’s national football team, wrote on Instagram: “This situation is not the right of the honorable people of Iran. Living in prosperity, security, happiness, and economic stability is the undeniable right of the Iranian people.”

Voria Ghafouri, former captain of Esteghlal, reacted to the protests by announcing in a post that “in solidarity with the dear people of Iran and in protest against economic and livelihood pressures, Café Voria branches will be closed on Thursday and Friday.”

Hamid Derakhshan, former captain of Iran’s men’s national football team, wrote on Instagram in response to the nationwide protests:

“Being together is our greatest strength. My dear people, even in the hardest days we have learned not to surrender.” Rasoul Khadem, world and Olympic wrestling champion, posted an Instagram story that read: “Do not think I am concerned for myself; I am worried about the cancer afflicting my homeland.”

Continuing the protests by Iranian athletes abroad to the Islamic Republic’s complete internet shutdown during the protests, Alireza Faghani, the Iranian international referee, wrote in an Instagram story: “The internet in Iran has been cut off, but the voices are still being heard.”

Masoud Shojaei, former captain of Iran’s national football team, called on the international community to prevent the silencing of the Iranian people’s voice. In a message posted on his Instagram page addressing global public opinion, he wrote: “Be the voice of the people of Iran; this is a humanitarian crisis. These people are not criminals. They are seeking freedom, human dignity, and a bright future. Please do not remain silent.”

Ashkan Dejagah, former national team captain, wrote in an Instagram story: “The internet in Iran has been cut off, but the voices are still being heard.” He also reacted to the internet shutdown in another story, stating: “For 100 hours, 90 million people have been fighting the world’s most ruthless oppressors without any communication. With bare hands. No one has any news from them.”

Allahyar Sayyadmanesh, national team forward for Westerlo in Belgium, posted an Instagram story in protest of the Islamic Republic’s complete internet shutdown aimed at suppressing what he described as the Iranian people’s national uprising, writing: “Pray for the brave people of Iran.”

Reza Ghasemi, former Iranian 100-meter sprint record holder, wrote in protest of the widespread killing of Iranian people by the Islamic Republic during the suppression of the national uprising: “History will record that Khamenei’s criminal regime spilled the blood of innocent people in the streets.”

Sardar Azmoun, striker of Iran’s national football team, reacted to the killing of Iranian people by the Islamic Republic’s repressive forces by sharing an image of a tattoo on his hand bearing the phrase: “From the blood of the youth of the homeland, tulips have blossomed.”

Omidreza Ravankhah, head coach of Iran’s U-23 national football team, said in response to the protests: “It is my social duty to stand beside my people in these circumstances, no matter the consequences for me. I hope their voices are heard. Unfortunately, for years in my country, the management of many affairs has been at the lowest possible level, and people have no right to any form of protest.”

Atila Hejazi, former Esteghlal player and son of Nasser Hejazi, the legendary Iranian football figure and former Taj club icon, wrote in an Instagram story in reaction to the killing of 12,000 protesters in Iran: “Young people who cared about freedom did not deserve death.”

Sara Khadem, Iranian chess grandmaster, wrote in an Instagram story: “So much crime and oppression will not go unanswered. Soon we will celebrate freedom together.”

Heshmat Mohajerani, former head coach of Iran’s national football team, reacted to FIFA’s silence regarding the suppression and killing of protesting citizens, including several footballers, stating: “You have closed your eyes to the killing of our innocent people. History will judge you. Does your unity and morality exist only on paper and not beside the bodies of football’s children?”

Mehdi Bibak, former head coach of Iran’s national taekwondo team, wrote: “They kill our defenseless people in order to remain in power. Out of shame and fear, we have closed our eyes and lack the courage to look.”

Against the Protests; Governmental and Military Figures and Institutions

In response to the protests and strikes, and the subsequent expansion of demonstrations, including nightly gatherings, a series of official positions were issued by governmental, political, and executive authorities, as well as security institutions and the judiciary. State-affiliated media, in their coverage of developments, focused on highlighting alleged foreign threats, issuing warnings to the United States and Israel, and promoting the claim that the protests were directed by “hostile groups”, a narrative that does not align with field evidence or the breadth of the protesters’ demands.

The following statements can be analyzed as evidence of a coordinated state narrative portraying protesters as hostile or foreign-backed actors, which can support an inference of state policy, organizational coordination, and knowledge in the context of assessing whether underlying abuses were committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack against a civilian population for the purposes of qualifying crimes against humanity.

In the early days of the protests, which began with gatherings of shopkeepers and bazaar merchants, officials and media outlets close to security institutions warned about the “politicization” of the demonstrations. The Fars and Tasnim news agencies published reports claiming the presence of “small organized cells” among the protesters and alleged that the trade-related protests were at risk of “security exploitation.”

The Deputy Minister of Interior for Security Affairs described fluctuations in the currency market as the result of a “psychological atmosphere” and urged citizens not to be influenced by what he called “enemy propaganda.” The Head of the Judiciary also warned that actions which, in his words, cause “disruption to the economic system” could face severe judicial prosecution.

The Head of the Supreme Court, referring to the role of officials’ performance in the emergence of economic problems, described poor living conditions and rising prices as among the main challenges facing society. At the same time, he emphasized that those whom he described as “disruptors of the economic system” would face crackdown.

Fatemeh Mohajerani, the government spokesperson, also commented on the protests, stating: “When the people’s voice rises, it means the pressures have been heavy, and it is the government’s duty to hear these voices.” She claimed that the right to peaceful assembly is recognized in the Constitution.

Meanwhile, media outlets such as Mashregh News and Tasnim News Agency described the protests as “limited” and alleged that they had an external origin or were subject to “media exploitation.”

At the same time, the Head of the National Tax Administration announced that the heads of the three branches of government had agreed to apply discounts and tax reductions for guilds and union groups. This measure was announced despite the fact that the protests had moved beyond purely economic demands and that political demands had also become prominent.

Mehr News Agency referred to a protest gathering in Fasa County as “rioting,” claiming that no military weapons had been used in the suppression of protesters and declaring the situation in the city to be calm. The official Saber News channel also claimed that officers had used launcher weapons firing pellet-based plastic rounds to disperse those gathered at the governor’s office. On the other hand, the Governor of Tehran, reacting to the protests on the fourth day, claimed that the policy of the Law Enforcement Forces had been one of restraint and that citizens had not faced arrest merely for protesting. Mohammad Sadegh Motamedian asserted that only in limited cases, following road blockages and minor clashes, had police taken action, and that there was no precise tally of the number of detainees.

As the protests continued into the fifth day, government officials and media outlets close to security institutions advanced narratives aimed at securitizing the demonstrations and reducing them to “riots,” while simultaneously attempting to downplay the scale of the crackdown and its human consequences.

The Fars and Tasnim news agencies, affiliated with security bodies and the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps, referred to protesters in their reports as “rioters” and claimed that the protests were accompanied by “acts of sabotage.” Fars News Agency reported the killing of two individuals during gatherings in Lordegan, stating that the protests involved “stone-throwing at government buildings” and that police had used tear gas to disperse the crowd. The outlet also described the situation in the city as “calm.”

Tasnim News Agency also reported the arrest of seven individuals in Kermanshah, claiming that they were “affiliated with hostile groups and the opposition abroad” and had “intended to turn the protests violent”—an allegation made without presenting independent evidence.

Mohammad Sadegh Motamedian, the Governor of Tehran, stated that the protests by bazaar merchants had been “managed in coordination with Faraja (the Law Enforcement Command)” and characterized the police response as measured and restrained. He maintained that any confrontations were limited in scope and occurred solely in cases involving what he described as “disruption of public order.”

Meanwhile, Fatemeh Mohajerani, the government spokesperson, called on governors to hold meetings with representatives of guilds and bazaar merchants to facilitate “direct dialogue.” These remarks were made amid numerous reports of arrests, the killing of protesters, and other violent crackdown during the same period.

On the other hand, Mohammad Saleh Jokar, head of the Parliament’s Internal Affairs and Councils Commission, announced that review of the “Bill on Gatherings and Marches” had been placed on the parliamentary agenda with greater urgency, a bill previously described by critics as a tool for restricting citizens’ right to peaceful assembly.

In the academic sphere, the Educational Vice Presidency of the University of Tehran announced that classes and examinations would be held online until January 8, citing “cold weather and energy imbalances” as the reasons for the decision. The move was made amid ongoing student protests and an intensified security atmosphere surrounding universities.

As the nationwide protests entered their sixth day, officials of the Islamic Republic and media outlets affiliated with official and security institutions, alongside the continuation of street-level repression, sought to frame the protests as influenced by “foreign interference” and disruptive to “national security,” thereby attempting to strip the protesters’ demands of legitimacy.

Abbas Araghchi, the Foreign Minister, reacted to Donald Trump’s support for the protesters by describing it as “irresponsible and dangerous,” claiming that such statements targeted Iran’s sovereignty and that the Islamic Republic’s armed forces were “ready to respond.” At the same time, Mohammad Bagher Ghalibaf, the Speaker of Parliament, and Alireza Salimi, a member of the parliamentary presiding board, issued warnings in threatening language that any “foreign interference” would be met with a “regret-inducing” response.

The Supreme National Security Council, in a letter sent to domestic media outlets, urged them to condemn Trump’s support for the protesters and to draw a “clear line with the enemy,” while refraining from publishing what it described as “raw, emotional, or tension-inducing” content. The council also expressed appreciation for media outlets that, according to its statement, had “contributed to stability”, a move indicative of intensified control and direction over the media narrative.

In the judicial and security sphere, officials such as Saeed Shahvari, Chief Justice of Lorestan Province, announced the arrest of protesters in cities including Azna and Delfan, without providing transparent details regarding the charges or the legal process. At the same time, some religious authorities close to the establishment, including Hossein Nouri Hamedani, while implicitly acknowledging economic pressures, sought to reduce the roots of the crisis to “mismanagement” and avoided linking the protests to the political structure.

On the seventh day of the protests, Ali Khamenei, the Supreme Leader of the Islamic Republic of Iran, issued his first public statement since the start of the new wave of nationwide demonstrations, emphasizing the need to confront what he termed “rioting.” He stated that, in his view, protest can be acceptable and dialogue with protesters is possible, but added that “a rioter must be put in his place,” asserting that dialogue with a “rioter” is futile.

In another part of his remarks, he referred to the recent protests by shopkeepers and bazaar merchants, describing the bazaar as “among the most loyal sectors to the system.” He said that one cannot confront the Islamic Republic in the name of the bazaar and claimed that some individuals are exploiting the economic demands of merchants with the aim of destabilizing and undermining the country’s security. He also described the sharp fluctuations in the exchange rate and the collapse of the national currency’s value as “unnatural,” attributing them to the “enemy.”

On the eighth day of the protests, the Commander of Faraja (Law Enforcement Command) announced that what he described as the process of “targeted arrest of ringleaders” had begun. Ahmadreza Radan claimed that these individuals were accused of inciting citizens and had received foreign currency in exchange for their actions.

Meanwhile, official media outlets and channels affiliated with security institutions continued to describe the protests in various cities as “riots,” accusing protesters of ties to foreign actors and connections with opposition groups. This narrative, presented without clear evidence, seeks to deny the socioeconomic and protest-driven nature of citizens’ demands and to attribute the demonstrations to external interference.

Mohammad Jafar Montazeri, Head of the Supreme Court, described the protests as unrelated to the will of the people and dismissed Donald Trump’s threats of support for the Iranian public as ineffective. Alaaeddin Boroujerdi, a member of Parliament’s National Security Commission, warned the United States that in the event of any action, American interests in the region would be targeted. Ghasem Ravanbakhsh, a representative from Qom, characterized Trump’s support for protesters as foreign interference.

In contrast, Ahmad Naderi, a member of the Parliament’s presiding board, assessed the protests as stemming from runaway inflation and the government’s economic mismanagement. At the same time, the Law Enforcement Commander of Yazd Province announced the identification and arrest of administrators of several social media pages linked to the protests.

Ali Rabiei, the President's social affairs advisor, said in response to the protests: "Iran today stands at one of the most complex moments in its history, a moment shaped not only by external pressures, but also by the accumulation of economic imbalances, the erosion of social capital, and policy errors over past decades."

On the ninth day of the protests, Mohammad Bagher Ghalibaf, Speaker of Parliament, referred to protesters as "rioters" and "troublemakers," alleging that they were connected to "intelligence services."

The Head of the Judiciary, speaking at a meeting of the Supreme Judicial Council in response to the protests, threatened demonstrators by declaring that detainees would face firm action and that there would be "no leniency." Emphasizing a policy of non-tolerance toward what he termed "rioting," he ordered that individuals who had assisted protesters, even if they had not personally participated in the demonstrations, be prosecuted. On January 10, he stated regarding the protests: "The plot of a major sedition that the enemy had planned over a long period was dismantled by the people."

The spokesperson for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Islamic Republic also described the U.S. President's warnings about the suppression of protesters in Iran as "psychological warfare" by the United States and Israel.

The IRGC Organization of Lorestan Province, in a statement, announced the end of what it called a "period of leniency," declaring that "those responsible for and organizers of the riots will be identified decisively and in the shortest possible time, and legal action will be taken against them."

In the executive branch, the government announced restrictions and shutdowns of internet access in certain areas. The Minister of Communications stated that this policy is not "absolute or permanent," but is implemented based on security and livelihood considerations. At the same time, Parliament approved the general outlines of the 1405 (2026–2027) budget bill, promising "livelihood reforms", a move that observers viewed as an attempt to contain growing public dissatisfaction.

Hamid Rasai, a Tehran MP, reacted to the public protests against the government and the continued rise in prices by stating: "These people in the streets say they want to protest, but some others come and turn it into rioting. Who is voicing the concerns of these people? Is the people's voice being heard in Parliament?"

The Public and Revolutionary Prosecutor of Shahrud also claimed that the voice of protesters should be heard, but warned that those who engage in what he termed "rioting" would face legal consequences.

Following the attack by law enforcement-security forces on Imam Khomeini Hospital in Ilam, President Masoud Pezeshkian responded by issuing an order to the Minister of Interior to form a special team to conduct a comprehensive review of the events in Ilam and to provide "as soon as possible a thorough and precise report on the causes of the unrest and how it was handled."

Ahmad Nejatian, Head of the Iranian Nursing Organization, reacted to the police attack on a hospital in Ilam by stating that hospitals and medical centers must remain safe environments for both the public and healthcare staff. He emphasized that nurses and other medical personnel, in accordance with ethical principles and their professional charter, provide services to all patients and visitors regardless of race or religion. He stressed that any act creating insecurity in hospitals is contrary to the principles of the healthcare system in Iran and worldwide.

The Public Relations and Information Center of the Ministry of Health also issued a statement in response to the incursion of military and law enforcement forces into Imam Khomeini Hospital in Ilam. The statement underscored the necessity of preserving the sanctity of the healthcare system and described entry into medical centers, destruction of medical equipment, and harm to healthcare workers as being in clear violation of humanitarian, ethical, and citizens' rights principles.

Mohammad Jafar Qaempanah, deputy to President Masoud Pezeshkian, reacted to the attack on Imam Khomeini Hospital in Ilam and the firing of tear gas into the courtyard of Sina Hospital in Tehran, saying: "When a group occupies a hospital, what is the law enforcement force supposed to do?"

The government spokesperson, commenting on the incidents at the Ilam hospital, stated that any damage or intrusion into this sector, during any kind of protest, amounts to harm to public health and is entirely unacceptable.

The Deputy for Communications and Information of the President's Office stated in response to the protests that protest is a citizens' right, and that it is the duty of the government and the governing authorities to listen to the voices of protesters, respond, and address their reasonable demands.

On the eleventh day since the start of the nationwide protests, Mohseni Ejei, Head of the Judiciary, once again referred to the events as "riots." He said that special branches staffed by experienced judges had been established to swiftly handle the cases of what he termed "riot elements," and that their trials should not be postponed to the coming months.

Araghchi, the Foreign Minister, stated in reaction to the protests that Iran's internal matters concern no one but the Iranian people. He claimed that "we are witnessing interaction between the government and the people, and, God willing, if there are protests and issues, they will be resolved, and I am very hopeful that this will happen."

The Governor of Tehran, referring to protest gatherings, said that if demonstrations lead to damage and destruction and deviate from the path of protest, the police are authorized to use weapons.

On the twelfth day of the protests, Azar Mansouri, Secretary-General of the Union of Nation Party, commented on the country's current conditions, stating: "Iran today is facing a set of intertwined economic, social, political, and governance crises, and the continuation of this situation, without fundamental reforms, endangers the country's future and national cohesion. Iran's problems are not merely economic. Structural and chronic inflation, deep production recession, the continuous decline in the value of the national currency, and widespread unemployment, especially among youth and the educated, are only part of the current crisis."

The Deputy Chair of Parliament’s Article 90 Commission also commented on the protests, stating: “The bazaar merchant is concerned about putting bread on the table and is protesting.”

He further claimed that anyone who chants slogans and disrupts society is a “rioter” and is not driven by economic hardship.

Following a wave of student arrests during the protests, Vahid Kanani Kalvar, a member of Parliament’s Education, Research and Technology Commission, claimed that “the situation of these students is being followed up, but in any case, a space must be created for dialogue with these protesters.” Abdolvahed Feyazi, another member of the Education and Research Commission, confirmed the detention of children and teenagers during the protests and asserted that “naturally, the judicial authority will deal with them in accordance with the rights of children, adolescents, and youth in the Islamic Republic, and there is no cause for concern.”

As the protests continued into the thirteenth day, alongside the expansion of strikes and nightly gatherings, a series of official statements were issued by government officials, security institutions, and the judiciary. A significant common thread in many of these statements was the securitization of the protests and an emphasis on “decisive action.”

Ali Khamenei warned against what he described as “acts of destruction,” stating that the Islamic Republic “will not back down” in the face of such actions and emphasizing the necessity of confronting them. This position has been assessed as part of an ongoing effort to officially distinguish between “protest” and “destruction,” while legitimizing security measures against demonstrators.

At the diplomatic level, Abbas Araghchi described the likelihood of any foreign military intervention in Iran’s developments as remote, calling it a “failed experience.” At the same time, Iran’s Ministry of Foreign Affairs characterized statements of support by U.S. officials and some Western countries as “interventionist,” framing the protests as an internal matter of Iran.

In the judicial-security sphere, the judiciary and law enforcement institutions once again emphasized severe, deterrent, and uncompromising action against protesters. These positions were accompanied by announcements of case filings against certain individuals, as well as intensified monitoring of cyberspace and professional and economic activities.

On the thirteenth day of the protests, the Prosecutor General announced in threatening language that a special directive had been issued to expedite the handling of detainees’ cases outside the normal order of proceedings, stating that once indictments are issued, the cases should be promptly referred to court. Movahedi Azad, claiming that protesting citizens were linked to foreign actors, added: “Their punishment must be carried out without any leniency or clemency and strictly in accordance with the law.”

He also called for the prosecution of all “involved elements, including direct perpetrators, instigators, domestic and foreign actors, and even those active on social media.”

Amir Saeid Iravani, the Permanent Representative of the Islamic Republic to the United Nations, in a letter to the UN Security Council, described the United States as “responsible for rioting and violent acts” in Iran. Iravani claimed that “this interference is carried out through threats, incitement, and deliberate encouragement of violence and the disruption of peace and stability.”

Hossein Nouri Hamedani, a cleric supportive of the government, stated in reaction to the protests: “Today we have cultural problems such as hijab, and we also have economic problems. People have been driven to the brink by rising prices and difficult living conditions. The decline in the value of the national currency has left people confused, and this inflation and hardship have bent people’s backs.”

The Islamic Republic’s Army, in a statement issued on Saturday, January 10, while “warning” protesters in various cities, described Israel as the main force behind inciting unrest. At the same time, it claimed that it would protect the country’s “national interests, strategic infrastructure, and public property.”

President Masoud Pezeshkian, on Saturday, January 10, attributed the protests to foreign actors and referred to protesters as “troublemakers.” He called on the public to assist and urged them to gather in neighborhoods to prevent what he described as “chaos.” He participated in pro-government rallies, labeled protesters as “terrorists,” and called for decisive action by security forces against them. In another message, he characterized the protests as an “American-Israeli conspiracy and the enemy’s revenge for defeat in the 12-day war.” Pezeshkian added that he had tasked various groups with conducting a thorough review of the causes and factors behind these events in order to identify the main roots of the violence.

According to information published by media outlets close to security institutions, a member of the Society of Seminary Teachers of Qom stated: “Destructive rioters are a clear example of mohareb (one who wages war against God), baghi (armed rebel), and mofsed fel-arz (corruptor on earth), and their religious and legal ruling is clear and indisputable.”

The Iranian Army, in a statement, declared that it is committed to protecting the country’s “national interests, strategic infrastructure, and public property.” In the statement, the Army accused Israel of supporting “another conspiracy” aimed at “disrupting order and calm in cities and undermining public security.”

Gholamhossein Mohseni Ejei, Head of the Judiciary, referring to forces involved in suppressing the protests who were killed during clashes, stated that “the blood that has been shed must be avenged.” Speaking at a session of the Supreme Judicial Council broadcast live on state television, he emphasized that this “retribution” must be “decisive and effective” and carried out “using various capacities.” Mohseni Ejei added that he had instructed the Prosecutor General and other prosecutors to expedite the “trial and punishment” of individuals he described as the “main elements” of the protests.

In another statement on January 19, he reiterated the need to accelerate judicial proceedings against those detained during the protests, stressing that the review of these cases must be conducted “without the slightest delay.” He added that the judiciary would not permit any procrastination in handling these cases and that, from the perspective of the Islamic Republic’s authorities, ensuring the deterrent nature of punishments for protesters is considered a “legitimate public demand.”

Mohseni Ejei, regarding judicial measures against protesters, stated: “Those who have killed, set fires, caused material and moral damage, and helped enemies, these individuals have not merely disrupted public order; they have committed a clear act against the country’s security. I have instructed the Legal Affairs Department that if there is any legal gap concerning the recent incidents, they must promptly submit an urgent two- or three-priority bill.”

Ali Khamenei, the Supreme Leader of the Islamic Republic, in a message marking pro-government rallies in Iran, described the gatherings as “a warning to American politicians” and urged them to abandon “deception” and not rely on “treacherous mercenaries.” He went on to label protesters as “domestic mercenaries,” claiming that the rallies had thwarted a “foreign enemies’ plan” that was meant to be carried out through them.

Mohammad Bagher Ghalibaf, Speaker of Parliament, in response to the public protests, referred to protesters as “rioters” and said, “They are the same ISIS members we saw what they did to neighboring countries.”

The spokesperson of the Islamic Republic’s government, commenting on the internet and communications shutdown affecting citizens, including phone services, stated that “this measure stems from the current special security conditions and is beyond the government’s control.” Fatemeh Mohajerani, despite five days having passed since the internet blackout, claimed that “the government considers free access to the internet a right of the people.” She acknowledged the protests and said the government even hears “harsh voices,” adding that the President had instructed the Ministry of Interior to create a mechanism for dialogue with protesters and that an emergency plan had been prepared for implementation.

The Minister of Communications, one week after the internet shutdown in Iran, claimed: “We are seriously pursuing the matter so that people’s communications can be restored as soon as possible and we can provide services to the public as before.”

Amin Hossein Rahimi, the Minister of Justice, told official news agencies: “Anyone who has been present in the streets since January 8 is certainly considered a criminal.”

These remarks were made in continuation of officials’ positions regarding the recent public protests in Iran.

Abbas Araghchi, Iran’s Foreign Minister, in an interview with the U.S. television network Fox News, claimed that the Islamic Republic “has no plan to execute individuals who were arrested for participating in the protests.” He also asserted that the number of those killed in the nationwide protests was not in the thousands and that “only hundreds” had died. This claim was made despite data compiled by HRANA indicating that, at that time, within 18 days, at least 2,615 deaths had been confirmed, a figure that more than tripled in the following days.

Aziz Nasirzadeh, the Minister of Defense of the Islamic Republic, during the protests, claimed that “rioters had used synthetic drugs,” and even stated that some of the deceased had “died without any prior condition because they had overconsumed.”

Seyed Mohammad Khatami, in a statement reacting to the protests, said that in addition to sanctions and external pressures, many ongoing policies and structural flaws have intensified the protests. He also claimed that statements by Israeli officials and support from the United States played a role in the formation of the protests, describing them as part of a large, premeditated conspiracy against Iran.

Hossein Darzi, Iran’s Deputy Permanent Representative at the United Nations, referred to Iranian protesters as “ISIS-like terrorists” during an emergency meeting of the UN Security Council and described the U.S. representative’s remarks about the bloody suppression of protesters as “baseless.”

Esmail Baghaei, spokesperson for Iran’s Ministry of Foreign Affairs, wrote on X in response to potential U.S. attacks: “It is obvious that the Islamic Republic of Iran will respond forcefully and decisively to any act of aggression.”

Asghar Jahangir, spokesperson for Iran’s Judiciary, declared on January 18, that participation in the nationwide protests constitutes a crime, stating that “those charged with moharebeh (waging war against God) will face the most severe punishments.”

The Foreign Ministry spokesperson, reacting to the nationwide protests, claimed that the demonstrations had turned violent due to the presence of trained foreign elements. Esmail Baghaei also described European countries’ expressions of concern over human rights in Iran as “an outright lie.”

The Head of the Supreme Court, in response to the nationwide protests, warned that the cases of those he described as “terrorist and riot elements” are a priority for the judiciary. He stated that these cases would be handled exceptionally, in the shortest possible time, and within the framework of the law, adding that there would be no leniency toward those responsible for creating “insecurity and violence” in society.

Abdolrahim Mousavi, Commander-in-Chief of the Army, attributed the protests to foreign countries, stating that they incite “unrest” in Iran to compensate for their defeats.

On January 19, Mohammad Bagher Ghalibaf, Speaker of Parliament, acknowledged in his pre-agenda speech during a public parliamentary session that thousands had been killed in the recent protests. He also described the nationwide protests as a “sedition” and claimed they were a continuation of Israel’s “12-day war” against Iran.

Mohammad Hassan Qadiri-Abiane, a conservative political activist, stated: “The fundamental mistake in dealing with seditionists was that the police and Basij forces were sent unarmed to confront armed seditionists. That is not an achievement. Sometimes they proudly say we did not allow the police and Basij to use weapons, but when the seditionists are armed, leaving security forces unarmed is no honor at all.”

Documentation and Accountability Initiatives and Projects

How Did HRA's Specialized Projects Mobilize?

Pasdaran Documentation Project

The Pasdaran Documentation Project (iranpdp.org), HRA's IRGC mapping initiative, documents the structure and chain of command of the IRGC from its inception to the present day. It connects emblematic incidents to units and individuals, visually demonstrating superior and subordinate relationships and linking actors to events that may amount to international crimes.

Recognizing that the majority of the repression unfolding in Iran was carried out by the IRGC, HRA assessed how PDP could be deployed most effectively in this moment. This marked the first time HRA used the PDP database in real time. It served as a practical test of how an established structural and chain of command database can immediately assist in identifying responsible actors during unfolding repression.

While HRANA documented where the most violent repression was taking place, PDP researchers worked to connect implicated units to specific incidents. Simultaneously, HRA legal advisors and partners at UpRights conducted preliminary legal qualifications of the documented conduct. This initial coordination lays the groundwork for deeper legal analysis in subsequent phases.

At the time of writing, 72 individuals and 209 units have been connected to the incident. Because of PDP's structure, an investigator can now visually identify 209 units across the country involved in repression, see the individuals linked to those units, and determine who bears superior responsibility over them. This work is preliminary, and it should be noted that anything at this stage will be reviewed on an ongoing basis .

For more information, please visit this address.

Spreading Justice

Spreading Justice (spreadingjustice.org) is HRA's database of individuals and entities implicated in human rights violations and potential international crimes. It serves as the central repository where HRA consolidates identifying information, official roles, institutional affiliations, and incident-linked justifications into individual profiles.

During this period, information was referred to Spreading Justice researchers and legal advisors through the HRANA team and network. HRANA's field reporting and verification provided the incident-level foundation, while Spreading Justice converted that material into structured profiles that link named perpetrators to incidents of violence occurring within their jurisdiction or under their effective control.

At the time of writing, Spreading Justice has identified at least 67 IRGC commanders and LEF personnel. They are listed below. Profiles are organized according to the area under each official's control, connecting the relevant geography and the violence documented there, directly to the commander's formal position. This approach is particularly critical during periods of widespread violence because it anchors responsibility to the official who exercised operational authority in the relevant province or county at the time.

Name & Links	FARSI NAME	Affiliation	Location	Position	Justification
Fathollah Jomeyri	فتح الله جمیری	IRGC	Qom	Commander of IRGC Qom Province	Jomeyri as a senior local military figure, held operational and strategic authority over the security response to protests and may therefore bear responsibility for the actions of forces under his command, including the use of excessive force, unlawful killings, including of minors, and arbitrary arrests. These acts and omissions may amount to violations of the ICCPR, including the right to life, freedom of expression, peaceful assembly, association, liberty and due process, freedom from torture cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment and a right to an effective remedy, as well as children's right to life, freedom of expression, peace assembly and best interests in the CRC.

Yadollah Bouali	یدالله بوعلی	IRGC	Fars	Commander of IRGC in Fars Province	Bouali has held several roles as a senior local IRGC commander since 2014, where he has held operational and strategic authority over forces who have committed various human rights violations - including discrimination against religious minorities in 2021, suppression of civil liberties in Kohgilyeh and Boyer-Ahmad between 2014-218, violent suppression of protests in Fars in 2019 and against since renewed nationwide protests that started in December 2025. Bouali may bear responsibility for the actions of forces under his command, including ordering or permitting the use of excessive and lethal force against protesters, including against childrenl persecution of religious minorities, arbitrary arrests and detention, and failure to prevent or investigate abuses.

Appendices

Appendix A—List of the Deceased

Identification of Victims:

While HRANA operates as a news agency, HRA is first and foremost a human rights organization. Our work is guided not only by the imperative to inform the public, but by a duty of care toward victims, survivors, and their families. In contexts of sustained repression and pervasive surveillance, the public disclosure of victim identities can expose relatives, witnesses, and local sources to retaliation, harassment, and further harm. Publication decisions are therefore made through a protection-centered framework that weighs the public interest against potential risks.

At the time of writing, HRANA has documented the killing of 7,007 individuals. The names of those confirmed as killed are listed below, alongside—where known—the victim’s age, the location of the incident, and one primary source used to cross-check the information.

Where a third-party source is cited, HRANA has independently verified the victim through its nationwide network of trusted contacts. Where HRANA is listed as the source, the victim’s identity and circumstances have been verified through HRA’s network and corroborated with at least one additional confidential source. In all cases, inclusion in this list has required multiple layers of review.

Following the list of named victims are additional confirmed cases in which deaths were verified collectively, based on analysis of photo or video evidence and witness statements gathered through HRANA’s network.

While this section is intended to inform the public and preserve an accurate record, HRA has deemed additional information inappropriate for public release at this time due to security and protection concerns. HRA maintains confidential documentation, including chain-of-custody records and corroborating source material, in secure archives.

HRA remains committed to providing verified information to the public while safeguarding its network and the integrity of its documentation. States, multilateral institutions, and national investigative authorities seeking access to primary-source documentation for accountability purposes may contact HRA at info@hra-iran.org

The verification process has not ended. HRA seeks only to inform the public of where the figures stand as of the time of publication and does not assert that these numbers represent final tallies.

Appendix B — List of Detainees

Despite extensive efforts, human rights organizations were unable to compile a complete list of all individuals detained during the recent protests due to clear obstacles — including the Iranian government’s obstruction of their activities. Nevertheless, the Human Rights Activists in Iran sought to obtain the most accurate possible estimate of the total number of detainees.

The figures in this section are primarily based on three sources:

1. Statements made by official authorities regarding arrests
2. Information published by other credible and reliable groups
3. Information received through the organization’s network of collaborators inside Iran, particularly within prisons

The estimate of 53,777 detainees is based on thousands of reports collected from both exclusive and open sources. The figures were finalized after consolidation and the removal of potential duplicate cases. It is highly likely that the actual number of detainees exceeds the estimated figure.

In addition to children, adolescents, and university students, among those detained in this report, at least 6 journalists, 27 healthcare workers, 73 civil society activists across various fields, and 84 teachers have been identified.

Additional Documentation

Video Reports

The videos in this compilation reflect HRANA’s verified video documentation from the reporting period. Many additional verified images and videos are not included because (1) consent to publish was not provided, (2) publication could compromise confidentiality and the safety of victims, witnesses, or sources, or (3) the content is too graphic for public release, including imagery depicting mutilated bodies and severe injury.

In line with human rights principles, including respect for dignity, privacy, and “do no harm,” and consistent with legal standards relevant to the responsible handling of potential evidence of human rights violations, HRA preserves these records securely. Where appropriate, and on a need-to-know basis, HRA can share relevant materials with stakeholders to support accountability efforts.
